UN Demands Truce, Troop Pullback

From CP, AP

By an overwhelming vote of 104 to 11, the United Nations General Assembly called Tuesday night for a ceasefire on the Indian sub-continent and for withdrawal of Indian and Pakistan troops back to their borders.

Only most of the Soviet bloc, India and a couple of other countries opposed the 31-country resolution.

Other countries, including Britain and France, abstained.

Even the Soviet bloc was not unanimous in its opposition, with Romania voting with the majority.

The resolution is not binding and India is not expected to pay any attention to it.

United States and China, who have sided with Pakistan in the war, voted for the resolution, as did Canada.

Joining the Soviet Union and India in opposition were tiny new state Bhutan on the Indian border, and Cuba. Five other countries stayed away and one country declined to participate in the vote.

The vote was a reflection of the feeling of a majority of the countries that the sovereignty and territorial integrity of countries are inviolate and must not be interfered with.

In speeches before the vote, Canada and Pakistan called for UN supervision of any ceasefire. But there was no resolution on this matter.

A Soviet resolution calling for a ceasefire linked with political settlement in East Pakistan was not put to a vote.

In the war, India suffered a severe blow on its western front Tuesday but claimed it had crushed the "hard outer crust" of East Pakistan defences. It urged the Pakistani army in the east to surrender.

The Indians, under heavy attack in the west, admitted they had lost the town of Chhamb in the northern state of Kashmir. If the Pakistani drive there is unchecked, it will cut a vital road to the northern part of that disputed state. Chhamb is 30 miles northwest of the major Indian town of Jammu.

But on the Eastern front, All-India Radio reported Indian troops were "tightening the ring" around the East Pakistani capital of Dacca after capturing a series of important towns in the province.

In other developments:

● An official Pakistani spokesman in Rawalpindi said 305 civilians had been killed and 500 injured since Monday by Indian air force bombing and strafing in both parts of Pakistan.

● In Calcutta, officials of India's West Bengal border state said preparations were being made for the return of nearly 10 million refugees driven into India this year by internal strife in East Pakistan.

● In Moscow, informed non-Soviet diplomatic sources said the Chinese government will not intervene militarily in the war as long as Pakistan forces continue fighting.

However, should Pakistan show it is unable to hold out against the Soviet-backed Indian war machine, one said: "We will have a tailor-made situation for a people's war.

"China is not going to give it up."

Civilian Rule Ahead for Pakistan

Pakistan Radio announced Tuesday that President Gen. Agha Momammad Yahya Khan has asked two political strongmen in his regime to form a central coalition government — a move that would end his one-man military rule.

The government-run radio said Yahya requested leftist leader and former foreign minister Zulkfikar Ali Bhutto and rightist leader Murul Amin to set up the coalition government after Dec. 27.

Amin, who heads the minority Pakistan Democratic Party, is an East Pakistani and would assume the role of prime minister, while Bhutto would be his deputy.

Yahya, in an announcement from his home in nearby Rawalpindi, said he had made the decision to end his one-man rule in light of the civil war with East Pakistan and war with India, which have resulted in the disruption of communications between the two wings of the country, Radio Pakistan said.

January End Seen For U.S. Surtax

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau and senior ministers say they are confident after meetings in Washington that the international trade and money crisis will be settled in a matter of weeks and United States surtax on imports withdrawn.

Bilateral trade disputes between the U.S. and Canada are expected to be resolved simultaneously, although differences apparently remain on the future exchange rate of the Canadian dollar.

While expressing confidence on immediate trade and money problems following Monday's meetings with President Nixon, the prime minister attached the greatest significance to what he said was Nixon's reassurance that the U.S. has no wish to dominate Canada economically or politically.

That "fantastically new statement from the mouth of a president of the United States" means that Canadians will be able to consider imminent policy on controlling foreign investment "with greater freedom, less apprehension and less inferiority complex."

The prime minister's assessment of his Washington trip, reinforced by ministers and officials who accompanied him, emerged from a series of briefings, a press conference before he left Washington Tuesday morning and in a report to the Commons on his return.

His report back in Canada provoked mixed reaction that ranged from reserved approval by the Progressive Conservatives to harsh criticism by New Democrats.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said he was pleased about the Washington trip, but suggested that Nixon's general assurances about respect for Canadian autonomy should be backed up by more precise "guidelines" governing U.S.-Canada relations.

Linda's Wish May Yet Be Realized

By KATHRYN HAZEL
Colonist Reporter

Seven-year-old Linda wishes Christmas could be the way it used to be when Mommy was alive.

That was two years ago, before Linda's mother died and her father lost his job.

Tommie, three, and Joannie, five, were too young to remember much, but Linda does. There'd be a Christmas tree, which she would help decorate.

The boxes under the tree would be wrapped with red and green paper and inside would be wonderful things, like a doll, or a picture book, or a cuddly stuffed toy.

The "500" Fund

It isn't like that any more. Even when Daddy was still working, Christmas wasn't as much fun. Meg, the housekeeper, tried to cheer the place up, and she made a turkey dinner, but it just wasn't the same.

Since last February, when Daddy was laid off, life's been even gloomier. Daddy seems tired all the time, he never seems to smile or want to play games.

When Linda showed him the list she'd made for the three of them to give to Santa, he just put it in his pocket and turned away. He didn't even read it.

Linda's beginning to wonder if Santa's going to come at all this year. It doesn't look like they're going to have a tree, and Linda knows that even if they did, there wouldn't be any presents.

A contribution to the Colonist 500 Fund can bring happiness to Linda's family and others this Christmas. Money from the fund goes to Victoria's neediest families so they too can enjoy the season.

Donations may be sent to or left at the Colonist, 2631 Douglas, or dropped off at Avis Rent-a-Car, 800 Douglas.

President Matthews, leader Stanfield after election

Tories Unite To Support New President, Stanfield

OTTAWA (CP) — Don Matthews, of London, Ont., was chosen Tuesday president of the national Progressive Conservative party amid cheers from a thousand delegates who were told repeatedly the Conservatives will form the next federal government.

During the presidential campaign at the annual convention candidates called for party unity and hard work to prepare for the federal election expected in 1972.

Matthews said in his victory speech Conservatives must form "a united party behind our leader, Robert Stanfield, who is going to be our next prime minister."

Matthews, 45-year-old president of Matthews Group Ltd., a land development and housing company, drew support from all across the country, his campaign organizers said.

The factionalism and dissension which have plagued the Conservative party since the fall of the Diefenbaker government were almost buried under the atmosphere of confident unity.

But a few manifestations of discontent appeared in the presidential campaign.

James Baskin of Renfrew, Ont., said the party has not made good use of its human resources, particularly women and youth.

A faction composed partly of maverick Westerners and Diefenbaker loyalists provided much of the support for candidate John Pallett, former MP for the Ontario riding of Peel and once parliamentary secretary to John Diefenbaker during Diefenbaker's period as prime minister.

Island Blanketed

Cars Spin In First Snowfall

Tow truck operators in the Victoria area and other parts of Vancouver Island were doing a booming business Tuesday night as the season's first major snowfall blanketed the Island with one to four inches.

But the snow, which turned to slush on most Victoria-area roads after causing a rash of minor traffic mishaps, was expected to melt away by midmorning in most of the lower elevations, weather officials at Victoria International Airport said.

Snow began to fall early Tuesday evening in the Victoria area and Tuesday afternoon in areas on Vancouver Island north of the capital.

Late Tuesday night, depth of the snow rose to about four inches in the outlying regions of the Victoria area, Saanich police and RCMP in other communities said.

"The snow is staying on the road but the cars aren't" an RCMP spokesman said.

Police throughout the northern portions of the Victoria area said tow trucks were kept busy pulling cars from ditches.

Saanich police, Sidney RCMP and Colwood RCMP said roads were being sanded in their areas.

Colwood RCMP said the Malahat was closed to vehicles without snow tires and chains as the snow piled up.

Police throughout the Victoria area recommended that drivers begin to put snow tires on their vehicles, in preparation for later storms. They said, however, that snow tires have not been declared mandatory in the area.

Victoria was hit by a power blackout in an area within Government, Douglas, Herald and Bay treets from 9:05 to 11:10 p.m. Tuesday. Parts of Blanshard, Queens, and Victoria West were also affected by the blackout, B.C. Hydro said.

Traffic lights were out of operation at Douglas and Bay and Douglas and Chatham as a result of the blackout.

Hydro said a fault on a line at Government and Bay, possibly due to the storm, caused the blackout.

Officials at Memorial Arena reported the building was hit by the blackout while several hundred people were playing bingo.

Bombs Kayo Atom Smasher

STANDFORD, Calif. (UPI) — Two bombs exploded early Tuesday at the Stanford linear accelerator, tearing to shreds the electronic heart of the two-mile long atom smasher.

The FBI began an immediate investigation of the sabotage, which may keep the research facility shut down for weeks.

No one was in the area where the blasts occurred and they were not discovered until workers entered the building at the remote "trigger" end of the facility about 8:30 a.m. and found it "in a shambles." An official said the blasts could have gone off anytime between 11 p.m. and 8 a.m.

Several hours later, about 400 employees of the linear accelerator were evacuated after a bomb threat, but firemen found no more bombs.

Two major components of the accelerator control center were knocked out by the blasts. Damage was estimated at $100,000.

Missed

Two retired Uruguayan army generals, both unsuccessful candidates in recent presidential elections, fought bloodless duel with old-fashioned muzzle-loading pistols Tuesday. Liber Seregni, left, holding pistol, and Juan Ribas, fired two shots each from a distance of 100 feet. Both men missed. Duel stemmed from pre-election remarks by Ribas who called Seregni a perjurer, traitor and coward. The matter ended in reconciliation. Man in white cassock is priest.

THE NEWS item said that B.C. motorists could expect yet another car insurance premium hike this year — a guesstimated 5.9 per cent average jump. Continued inflation is cited as one of the main reasons for the boost and inflation, therefore, is the meat of today's offering.

That 5.9 per cent hike will mean that our insurance rates will have climbed a very tidy 82.7 per cent during the past 10 years. A somewhat greater percentage than our increased weekly take home during the same decade.

But leave us not rail against insurance rates to the exclusion of just about every other facet of everyday living. The figures are pretty shocking, pretty sad.

STICKING WITH the auto for a moment, I was surprised to discover that new car prices are up only 2.8 per cent during the 10 years. Auto repairs, which, of course, reflect in insurance premiums, are something else again. A brake relining job, for instance, has gone up 58.4 per cent and to get a fender repaired you'll pay 76.6 per cent more than in 1961. Gasoline is not as bad as I thought — gas has been held to a 23.4 per cent increase and tires are up only 17.7 per cent.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics figures on food stuffs should prove to the average husband that the average wife is not blowing his money. Wives have a pretty tough time in that old supermarket trying to make the buck go as far as it used to go.

Tomatoes are up 75.8 per cent, milk, 42.9, stewing beef 44.6, and lettuce, 53.7. Even the lowly hamburger meat is up 45.6 per cent. Sirloin steak costs 37 per cent more, fish has jumped 48.9, coffee 33.8, and bread, 29.6 per cent.

STRANGELY ENOUGH, there are some prices lower today than they were 10 years ago. Bananas lead the way, they're down 10.7 per cent. Grade A large eggs are 9.2 per cent cheaper, frozen orange juice is 7.5 down and turkeys are down 3.4.

Check out the cost of clothing a family and wince.

Children's shoes have risen 49.6 per cent, men's shoes are up 42.9 per cent. A man buys a new suit, he shells out 35 per cent extra and when he gets it dry-cleaned he pays 30.5 per cent more. Women's coats are up 33.3 per cent and you get soaked 20.6 extra on diapers. Women's hosiery is the only break in the clouds — stockings are down 4.1 per cent.

BEAUTY doesn't come cheap. That hairdo at the parlor is up 47.5 per cent, but don't feel too badly gals, men's haircuts have jumped 72.3 per cent and with my thinning locks, I assure you it isn't worth it. Soap is up 33.7 per cent, toothpaste a modest 13.3 per cent.

Get your teeth fixed — 67.9 per cent higher, and optical care has risen 52.5. But prescriptions have gone down 5.2 per cent and if you go the vitamin tablet route, they're 7.9 per cent cheaper.

HOUSING costs are sky-high in percentage increase. Interest rates are up a whopping 91.5 per cent, property taxes have gone up 58.4 per cent and personal property insurance has risen 85.4 per cent. Home ownership costs are up 70.4 per cent, electricity is up a modest 25 per cent, telephone only 8.6 per cent and fuel oil, only 2.3 per cent. Rents have increased by 22 per cent.

Go to the flicks, you pay 105.5 per cent more than 10 years ago and you see films that must surely be 100 per cent inferior. Sporting events have jumped 45.1 per cent and sports equipment costs 47.6 per cent more. Newspapers are up 72.9 per cent and if you smoke, you burn up 38.5 per cent more; if you drink hard booze, you swallow another 28.2 per cent increase. The beer drinker is somewhat more fortunate, his increase is only 17.3 per cent.

You think your TV repair bill is higher? Right, by 33.3 per cent. But a TV console set is cheaper by 10 per cent and radios are down 6.9 per cent. Your Christmas bill for toys is 25.4 per cent higher and if you want your exercise via a bicycle, shell out 23 per cent more:

Furniture prices are up 25.6 per cent, although stoves are down 3.5 per cent. Send a letter, pay 43.9 per cent more.

FORTUNATELY, the 10-year increases can be afforded by a great number of wage earners, but for the pensioners, those on fixed incomes, the increases have become an almost insurmountable barrier to everyday living. Theirs is a life of constant cutbacks, of doing without many of the necessities and certainly, without many of the niceties.

If the foregoing has been painful and given you a headache, cheer up. Headache tablets have dropped 7.5 per cent.

End to One-Man Rule Ahead for Pakistan

House accused India Tuesday of ignoring substantial U.S.-spurred concessions by Pakistan toward a political settlement in launching its full-scale war against that country.

Clearly stung by charges that the Nixon administration is anti-Indian, a White House official listed the following among concessions extended by Yahya Khan:

- Unilateral withdrawal of his troops from his rebellious eastern section.
- Agreement to give political autonomy to East Pakistan with only defence, foreign and fiscal policies retained by his federal government.
- Agreement to negotiate with the Bangla Desh rebels on Indian soil.

But India no longer wanted political evolution in East Pakistan, rather its political collapse, the official said. What began as a tragedy has become an attempt by India to dismember the sovereign state of Pakistan, he added.

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

Drooling Youngster

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What would cause a boy, 3, to drool from the mouth? He has no speech defect that I can detect, but I have to remind him to swallow all day. He is intelligent for his age.—H.D.

I'm generally inclined to look for the most obvious causes first. You don't say how long this problem has been present, but the likeliest probability is teething. Sometimes tooth eruption can be quite uncomfortable and cause excess flow of saliva. If that is the case, it will subside shortly.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My wife suggests that I drink one quart of water "as such" each day. I don't touch the stuff, but drink two quarts of liquid daily in the form of decaffeinated coffee. Is this satisfactory without the "as such" — or perhaps asking the kidneys to overwork filtering out the water?—J.C.A.

There's no reason for drinking water "as such" if you prefer it flavored (with coffee, or anything else). It's important only that you get sufficient fluid regardless of the flavoring. It's possible to drink too much water, but it doesn't often happen. Just be guided by your thirst. It's a mighty dependable guide.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Where does the term "plastic surgery" come from, and does cosmetic surgery of the nose leave prominent scars? Would you recommend plastic surgery for someone emotionally bothered by a misshapen feature?—E.D.

"Plastic" means that something has the capability of being molded, or shaped, so "plastic surgery" involves the reshaping of some part of the body (not always the face). The terms reconstructive and cosmetic surgery are also used.

Surgery on the nose usually leaves no visible scars at all, since the incisions ordinarily can be made inside the nose.

In your final question, yes, plastic surgery is quite often done because someone is emotionally bothered by some feature. The question has to be answered in terms of how much emotional turmoil is involved and how truly misshapen the feature is.

Move Urged To Improve Market Position

Ottawa Offers Self Rule to Farmers

By JIM NEAVES

WINNIPEG (CP) — The federal government is offering farmers legislation under which they can plan and control their own future, the same type of legislation given to labor unions, lawyers and doctors, Argiculture Minister H. A. Olson said Tuesday.

Olson told delegates to the National Farmers Union convention they should have the opportunity to use the powers to enhance their position in the market place.

In contrast to last year's convention when he was jeered and hissed, Olson was applauded several times by the 500 delegates during his speech which concentrated on the newly-proposed small farm development program and Bill C-176, national marketing legislation.

He received applause when he said there is "fairly persuasive evidence" the family farmer is the most efficient and desirable unit and for that reason the emphasis of the new development "is designed for small farmers and not for farmers who already own larger profitable farms."

Jobless Total: 500,000

OTTAWA (UPI) — The number of workers without jobs in Canada increased 56,000 to over a half-million in November and there was only a slight decrease in the underlying trend of unemployment.

Statistics Canada reported Tuesday there was "little change" from October in the over-all unemployment situation, because the increase in persons without work was about average for this time of year.

Release of the figures did not spark the usual heated exchanges in the House of Commons and Prime Minister Trudeau told opposition questioners he hoped the government's $1 billion deficit announced Oct. 14 would "take effect as soon as possible" to alleviate high unemployment.

Compared to November a year ago, employment increased 225,000 or 2.8 per cent, the labor force increased 252,000 or 3.0 per cent, and unemployment increased by 27,000 or 0.2 per cent.

Of B.C.'s 927,000-member labor force in November, 66,000 were unemployed. In October 53,000 of 930,000 were unemployed while November saw 76,000 of 881,000 not working.

The regional rates were 9.7 per cent in the Atlantic region, 8.4 per cent in Quebec, 5.6 per cent in Ontario, 4.5 per cent in the prairies and 6.9 per cent in British Columbia.

There was an above-average increase in unemployment among men over 25 years old, and there was an average increase in joblessness among persons under 25.

Canadians in Fight Zone

Rescue Efforts Pressed

OTTAWA (CP) — Efforts to get Canadians out of war-hot Pakistan are continuing despite the failure of two evacuation attempts cut short by near involvement in the shooting between Pakistan and India.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp told the Commons Tuesday that arrangements are being made to remove about 270 Canadians from West Pakistan, and Defence Minister Donald Macdonald says another try at plucking 40 Canadians and other nations from besieged Dacca in East Pakistan will be made when possible.

"The time has come to move them (the Canadians) to safer locations," Sharp said in reply to a question from Michael Forrestall, Conservative member for Dartmouth-Halifax East and his party's Commons defence critic.

A defence department spokesman said a Canadian Forces Boeing 707 jet will leave early today for Islamabad, the West Pakistani capital, and Karachi.

Macdonald said a new attempt, the third, to rescue Canadians from Dacca will depend on United Nations arrangements for a temporary ceasefire to enable a Canadian Hercules C-130 transport plane to make a landing at Dacca.

B.C. Under-Represented

THERE HAS BEEN much talk of reform or even abolition of the Canadian Senate and it may be a result of it that the senators have become more lively and useful in recent times than they once were — or certainly than they were reputed to be. But their activity has no bearing on one reform that cries for attention: the redistribution of Senate seats.

The present distribution still projects the circumstances of more than a century ago, when Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes were given equal representation. The western provinces as a fourth division, similarly represented, came later, and finally seats were added for Newfoundland.

The result is that Ontario has 24 Senate seats; Quebec has 24, the Maritimes have 24, the western provinces have 24, and Newfoundland has six for a total of 102. The western provinces individually have six each; New Brunswick and Nova Scotia 10 each, and Prince Edward Island four.

Dr. Norman McKenzie, former president of the University of British Columbia and also a former senator, advocated last month in an address to the Women's Canadian Club in Victoria that the Senate should be reorganized to increase the western and decrease the Maritimes representation. Dr. McKenzie's suggestion was that New Brunswick and Nova Scotia have six seats each, Prince Edward Island two, British Columbia 10, Alberta nine, Manitoba and Saskatchewan eight each and the Yukon and Northwest Territories one each.

If the 102 seats were divided according to 1971 provincial population, however, the allocation would be quite different. British Columbia would have 10 seats, as suggested by Dr. McKenzie, instead of six; Alberta eight instead of six, Saskatchewan four instead of six, Manitoba five instead of six, Ontario 37 instead of 24, Quebec 28 instead of 24, New Brunswick three instead of 10, Nova Scotia four instead of 10, Prince Edward Island one instead of four, and Newfoundland two instead of six.

Such a redistribution seems clearly in order, but it may still be a long way off. It would require amendment of the British North American Act, and all the disputation that might be involved in the process, and probably a period of adjustment so that senators from over-represented provinces would not have to be cast out precipitately.

But in addition to having six Senate seats compared with the 10 which representation-by-population would give it, British Columbia has another source of complaint, and one which Prime Minister Trudeau could and should remedy very quickly.

The province has six seats, but only four senators, three of them so recently appointed to fill vacancies that their names are in the last seven on the Senate's seniority list. Prince Edward Island, with a population of 111,000 against British Columbia's 2,196,000, has four senators, Newfoundland, with 524,000 people, has five senators, New Brunswick, with 632,000 people, has eight senators. Can Mr. Trudeau find no two in British Columbia worthy of sitting in the empty seats?

"Thank heavens they're in bed for the newscasts."

Refugees in Jeopardy

THERE HAS BEEN CONSIDERABLE confusion over conflicting reports from the United Nations in New York, the government in Ottawa and various other sources concerning the interrupted flight of a Canadian air force Hercules apparently trying to assist in the evacuation of refugees from Dacca, East Pakistan.

From the United Nations a despatch reaching this newspaper late Monday told of the Hercules having been forced to abandon a second attempt to get into Dacca when attacked and set afire by fighter planes over the Dacca airfield.

It was untrue. The aircraft had been fired on by unidentified ships while over the Bay of Bengal, but was not hit.

Whether it turned back to Bangkok because of this flak or because of the cancellation of the cease-fire at Dacca is not clear. What is obvious is that the drama was blown up out of all proportion, and what appeared to have been a serious incident turns out to have been nothing worse than a series of blunders.

However, in such a critical time it would be thought that both India and Pakistan would take the most fool-proof precautions where mercy missions are concerned. The people trying to get out of Dacca deserve the best protection. They were in East Pakistan on consular duty or as a part of the United Nations relief force or other humanitarian organizations.

The Hercules, diverted from a Christmas mail run for Canadian overseas missions at the urgent request of the United Nations, made its first attempt to land at Dacca on Sunday. It was interrupted by a strafing attack on the airfield by Indian fighters. Even the approach to the airport must have involved considerable risk.

With this lesson surely fresh in their minds, the combatants arranged a four-hour cease-fire in, on and over the field for a second flight. It was on this occasion that the Hercules encountered flak and a warning that the cease-fire was not being observed.

If things were uncomfortable for the crew of the Canadian aircraft, the situation of the approximately 260 refugees waiting for rescue at the airfield must have been much worse. They would be exposed to grave risks. It is for them that greatest concern should be felt.

If India and Pakistan — in the understandable excitement and confusion of war— cannot guarantee the security of an air rescue mission at Dacca they should make available immediately some other means of extricating these innocent people from their precarious position.

An accident to any of them or to their rescuers would not be easy to forgive.

The Palestinian Situation

Hussein Tightens His Grip

By ROBERT STEPHENS from Cairo

THE assassination in Cairo of the Jordan Prime Minister Wasfi el Tel was a grim reminder — as it was doubtless intended to be—that despite the crushing of the Palestinian guerrillas in Jordan by King Hussein's army in the battle of last July and the previous September, the Palestinians are still a force to be reckoned with in the Arab world.

The assassination was a symptom of both the bitterness left by the Jordan fighting and of the extent to which it has encouraged more extreme attitudes within the Palestinian guerrilla movement, including the largest and most moderate group of El Fatah. Wasfi Tel was the main instrument, together with the Bedouin units of the Jordan Army, used by King Hussein in his campaign against the guerrillas.

Although the assassins are believed to belong to an extreme faction of El Fatah, pledged to avenge the killing by the Jordan army of one of the Fatah guerrilla leaders, Abu Iyyad, an official spokesman of the Fatah-dominated Palestine Liberation organization has joined President Sadat of Egypt in condemning the killing. In fact, although apparently planned for some months past, the killing came at a particularly crucial moment both for Egypt and for the offical Palestinian guerrilla leadership. For President Sadat is now trying to organize national and pan-Arab support for a double-barrelled peace-or-war policy of pressing Israel and the United States into producing an early peace settlement based on the principle of full Israeli withdrawal from Egypt, or if this fails, of mobilizing for a renewed war against Israel.

At the same time Egypt and Saudi Arabia have been jointly trying to bring about a reconciliation and modus vivendi between King Hussein and the Palestinian guerrilla leadership, principally the Fatah. Talks on this subject have been going on in Jeddah at intervals over the past few weeks. They have made little or no progress, for it was clear that King Hussein does not want to accept the return to Jordan of Palestinian guerrillas under their own autonomous leadership. The only means of outside leverage of King Hussein is the financial and military aid he gets from Saudi Arabia. But such leverage is limited by Hussein's ability to count on substantial American support in arms and money for his present policy, as well as on some American protection against any military intervention in Jordan by her Arab neighbors, Syria and Iraq.

On their side, the Palestinian guerrillas are divided about how far to go in cooperating with King Hussein.

Some of the Fatah leaders still believe that the state of Jordan provides the only serious political and military base for the Palestinians and that for the time being this means coming to some working agreement with Hussein. But some of the younger militants inside the Fatah are against any compromise. They now share the view of the more revolutionary Leftist Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine that the overthrow of Hussein's regime is a necessary part of the struggle against Israel.

King Hussein has clearly made up his mind to consolidate his hold on his dynasty's original kingdom on the East Bank of Jordan, whatever the future of the Palestinian West Bank may be, and to avoid being drawn into new hostilities with Israel. While he is leaving the initiative in peacemaking to Egypt—and would be ready to follow Egypt's lead if it were successful — he would try to remain on the defensive in the event of war.

Although President Sadat has once more repeated that his decision for war has already been made, Egypt is still continuing her efforts to get a diplomatic settlement both through the United Nations and through American mediation.

The meeting here at the end of last month of the Arab League defence council was intended to co-ordinate plans for the "forthcoming battle" against Israel. But it underlined the fact, of which President Sadat was already well aware, that Egypt can count on very little effective military help from other Arab States if she resumes the fighting.

King Hussein's present policy means that Jordan's army, the most effective in the Arab world outside Egypt, is likely to maintain a passive role. It also means greater difficulty in maintaining military co-ordination between Egypt and Syria, or in bringing any force from Iraq back into position on the "Eastern Front."

But perhaps the most significant aspect of the tragedy of Wasfi el Tel is its warning that, however desperate the present position of the Palestinians, they cannot be simply steam-rollered out of existence as a national political community by the use of military force. Not only in the Israeli-occupied areas of the West Bank and Gaza, but also in the surrounding Arab countries, including Jordan, the Palestinians are now held under tight control as virtually a subject people. But they include some of the ablest and most active people in this area, and in Jordan—even on the East Bank alone — they are a majority of the population.

One of their greatest weaknesses has been the lack of a united and realistic leadership. The use of assassination as a political weapon is likely to make such a leadership even more difficult to achieve. Yet the creation of a more representative and united political body to speak for them will in the end give the Palestinians a more certain voice than the assassin's bullet in deciding their own political fate in any Middle East settlement.

It's an Ouchy Scene He's Playing

By LUBOR J. ZINK
from Ottawa

SO far the Canadian economy has not been damaged as severely by the American import surcharge as had been feared.

That's the word from Prime Minister Trudeau, who is at pains to allay the widespread uneasiness about his strained relations with Washington. At the same time he tries to dampen the vociferous odor of the apostles of xenophobic nationalism.

It's a difficult act. Not only because it seeks to tackle contradictory trends at the same time, but because it puts activist Trudeau on the defensive — a role that does not suit his temperament and mentality.

Trudeau's forte is intellectual aggression. Applied to politics his attitude leads to arbitrariness which, given a safe and pliable parliamentary majority, makes a mockery of the democratic process.

Having attained such a personally dominant position in the 1968 election, Trudeau spent three years translating the ivory tower abstractions of his armchair socialism into legislation and policy. If he took any note of opposition, it was to make it look obsolete and ridiculous.

Eventually, however, the implementation of his theories started clashing with immutable national interests.

The epicentre of Canada's vital interests is the unique continental symbiosis with the United States which is an imperative of geography, history and economics.

In all these spheres the two countries form an organic whole with an inextricably intertwined mutuality of self-interests. Common sense therefore dictates harmonious cooperation at all levels of the natural partnership. This requires, first and foremost, intimate relations between the two federal governments.

In other words, mutual trust between Ottawa and Washington is essential for the constant dovetailing of political, economic and administrative moves that the well being of both countries demands.

Considering her territorial expanse and small population which lacks adequate economic and defence capacity, Canada has obviously more to gain from close partnership than the United States. On the other hand, despite its might, the U.S. cannot be militarily and economically secure in this day and age without friendly Canadian co-operation. Washington thus can't afford to antagonize Canada by taking advantage of America's far greater strength, and no government in Ottawa mindful of basic national self-interest would alienate the U.S. by a childish demonstration of "independence" with policies detrimental to both countries.

Yet this is precisely what the Trudeau regime is doing. The collision course it is steering resulted from a series of unilateral moves which now amount to re-orientation of Canada's foreign policy that is at variance with joint Canadian-American interests.

Since it was a gradual process that happened to ride the fashionable waves of mindless anti-militarism and economic nationalism, its implications escaped public attention until the concurrent deterioration of Canada-American relations took the visible and painful form of U.S. treatment of Canada as a foreign unfriendly country.

This came as a shock, for most Canadians took the continental symbiosis for granted.

Looking for reasons of Washington's refusal to give Canada the customary special treatment when Ottawa asked for exemption from Nixon's import surtax, the general public instinctively linked the economic blow with Trudeau's foreign policy. Suddenly his seemingly disjointed moves, which started raising eyebrows only when he boosted Soviet propaganda during his trip to Moscow last May, fell into a systematic anti-American pattern.

Kosygin's attack on the U.S. from Ottawa last month reinforced this impression to the point where Washington's tough line is seen as retaliation for Trudeau's kicks.

Since Trudeau faces an election in the next 18 months, he can no longer ignore the questioning of his policies that is now gaining momentum even among his erstwhile admirers. Nor can he let the champions of myopic anti-American hysteria maintain that they are merely drawing the logical conclusion from his policies.

So Trudeau, while defending his preconceived course that flies in the face of reality, is forced to backtrack a few steps while fending off attacks from both flanks. Acting out of character, his performance is so unconvincing that he is losing his once-entranced audience.

Rocky Road to Socialism For the People of Ceylon

THE people of Ceylon are being given the shock of their lives. When they won their liberty from Britain in 1947 they embarked upon the pursuit of happiness which they felt freedom would bring. It began with a subsidy on rice to keep the low price of the people's commonest food. Then the country moved on to a free health service and free education. After that came subsidized fares on buses and trains, and a whole range of subsidies to farmers and tax emptions for the industrialists.

But for more than 10 years now local and foreign economists have been warning Ceylon that she could not continue to enjoy the comforts of a welfare state without enough money to pay for them. In more recent times, steadily declining earnings from the island's main exports of tea, rubber and coconut have caused the alarm bells to ring louder and louder. It was seen these subsidies were actually harmful in putting a brake on economic development; they blunted initiative. The trouble was that the highly-vocal left-wing parties, with their strong links with the trade unions, opposed any reduction in subsidies; and at the same time the few weak attempts by right-wing governments to alter the pattern all spelled disaster for them at the polls.

By LUCIEN RAJAKARUNA
from Colombo

The shock has been administered by the Trotskyist finance minister, Dr. N. M. Perera, presenting the second budget of Mrs. Sirimavo Bandaranaik's left-wing coalition government. He raised the price of rationed rice by 25 cents to one rupee per kilo. The ration is two kilos, and the people get the first one free. This was a courageous thing to do, because rice so often spells politics in Ceylon. He raised the price of wheat flour and bread, which are the usual substitute foods for rice. He brought sugar under ration at the existing price, and doubled the price of sugar sold outside the monthly ration of two pounds per person.

Next he raised the island's inland postal rate by 50 per cent and imposed a token levy of 25 cents on all those seeking treatment at Government hospitals — a service hitherto completely free. It was ironic that these stringent measures of capitalist rectitude should be performed by the leader of the country's oldest and biggest party of the Left, the Trotskyist Lanka Sama Samaja, which has hitherto been in the forefront of all campaigns to keep the subsidies, and that Dr. Perera, who has for years demanded that the government "ease the burden of the masses" should now impose greater burdens upon them.

The minister sought to justify these price increases — the widest and heaviest imposed since Ceylon became independent — as the only means of taking the country closer to the promised goal of socialism. He recalled the "new economic policy" of Lenin and the infant Soviet Union in support of these harsh measures.

But he did not get away with it completely. Within 24 hours opposition from the government's own back-benchers forced him to cancel the rise in the price of wheat flour and bread, and increase the monthly ration of sugar from two to three pounds. It will cost nearly Rs120 million (about $21,250,000) to do this.

But Dr. Perera also took a swipe at the rich. Saying the time had come for them to share the burdens of development, he imposed a ceiling of Rs2,000 (about $282) per month on tax-free personal incomes, promised to restrict the fringe benefits of executives in the private sector, pledged that he would limit the amount of land a person or a family could own, and stopped the local branches of foreign companies from remitting money abroad for "head office maintenance."

Dr. Perera also gave a warning that the government would take over part or total ownership of companies which "do not function in the national interest" — a clear hint to those suspected of engaging in huge foreign exchange rackets now being investigated, and those companies enjoying tax benefits for industry which are merely assembly plants for foreign manufactures.

Finally, Mr. Perera, taking a leaf out of Mao Tse-tung's book, is making it compulsory for office-bound civil servants to do a labor stint on the land, so that they may discover what some of the problems of the people and the country are all about.

that, however desperate the present position of the Palestinians, they cannot be simply steam-rollered out of existence as a national political community by the use of military force. Not only in the Israeli-occupied areas of the West Bank and Gaza, but also in the surrounding Arab countries, including Jordan, the Palestinians are now held under tight control as virtually a subject people. But they include some of the ablest and most active people in this area, and in Jordan—even on the East Bank alone — they are a majority of the population.

socialism. He recalled the "new economic policy" of Lenin and the infant Soviet Union in support of these harsh measures.

But he did not get away with it completely. Within 24 hours opposition from the government's own back-benchers forced him to cancel the rise in the price of wheat flour and bread, and increase the monthly ration of sugar from two to three pounds. It will cost nearly Rs120 million (about $21,250,000) to do this.

But Dr. Perera also took a swipe at the rich. Saying the time had come for them to share the burdens of development, he imposed a ceiling of Rs2,000 (about $282) per month on tax-free personal incomes, promised to restrict the fringe benefits of executives in the private sector, pledged that he would limit the amount of land a person or a family could own, and stopped the local branches of foreign companies from remitting money abroad for "head office maintenance."

Dr. Perera also gave a warning that the government would take over part or total ownership of companies which "do not function in the national interest" — a clear hint to those suspected of engaging in huge foreign exchange rackets now being investigated, and those companies enjoying tax benefits for industry which are merely assembly plants for foreign manufactures.

Finally, Mr. Perera, taking a leaf out of Mao Tse-tung's book, is making it compulsory for office-bound civil servants to do a labor stint on the land, so that they may discover what some of the problems of the people and the country are all about.

Pakistan's Bhutto Man To Note

By A Special Correspondent
From Rawalpindi, West Pakistan

The Indo-Pakistan war has its beginnings in the conflict of interests not only between two parts of a divided nation but between the personalities of two men — Sheikh Mujibur Rahman of East Pakistan and Zulfikar Ali Bhutto of West Pakistan.

For months the world has heard much of Sheikh Mujib, yet it is Bhutto who, long ago, held the key to the conflict. And in the weeks to come, the world will hear a good deal more of him.

Bhutto

First, it is necessary to recall March 1969, when President Ayub Khan was forced to hand power to General Yahya Khan, 52, who had been commander-in-chief of the Pakistan army since 1966.

General Yahya already had distinguished himself by becoming Pakistan's youngest brigadier (at 34) and its youngest general (at 40).

In early 1969 there had been waves of violent opposition to 62-year-old Ayub's style of government. Since seizing power in a bloodless coup 10 years before, Ayub had made it clear he favoured tough, presidential-type rule.

Even after riots flared against his regime in January 1969, the government-dominated national assembly rejected opposition demands to discuss formation of a British-style parliamentary administration.

The single most important figure in the rioting which preceded Ayub's resignation was Zulfikar Ali Bhutto. In November 1968 Bhutto had been jailed for his bitter criticism of the regime; by mid-February 1969 the mob protests — and a hunger strike by Bhutto — forced Ayub to ease the sentence to one of house detention.

Bhutto was the man who, as Ayub's foreign minister in 1964, had given his support and his blessings to many of the policies for which Ayub was to bear the brunt of popular wrath.

At the time of his imprisonment Bhutto was chairman of the Pakistan People's Party (PPP). And 1,000 miles away in East Pakistan, the Awami League led by Sheikh Mujibur Rahman was becoming increasingly powerful, ever more vocal.

On November 23, 1969, Bhutto told a meeting of workers in the West Pakistan town of Multan that East Pakistanis were right in feeling they were being victimized — politically and economically — by the western wing, and that the eastern province deserved a greater share in government.

Noting the Awami League's demand that, on a population basis, Pakistan's prime minister should be an easterner, Bhutto declared: "These demands must be conceded."

Changes with the Wind

When this stated conviction is compared with more recent developments in Pakistan, it can be seen that Bhutto has an extraordinary ability to "change with the wind," as one of his PPP critics puts it.

On that same day in Multan, Bhutto observed that the "economic exploitation of the people of East Pakistan was never done by the people of West Pakistan." Instead, he said, a small number of "capitalists from West Pakistan have committed injustices to the people of both wings."

On December 7 last year, national elections were held. Predictably, Sheikh Mujib's Awami League emerged the most powerful party in all Pakistan. But it had no support in the western wing. There, Bhutto's PPP was supreme.

On December 13, 1970, Bhutto told an interviewer: "I feel that all of us should enter the national assembly with an open mind and attempt to frame a constitution which would reflect the will of the people, guarantee social equality, economic justice and the integrity and solidarity of Pakistan."

In his reference to "integrity and solidarity," the former foreign minister served notice that he considered autonomy for East Pakistan (one of Sheikh Mujib's main election platforms) out of the question.

There were other, more serious, contradictions. Previously he had made frequent mention of the "will of the people" in national solidarity. But in his December 13 interview he declared: "The people have now chosen their representatives who will reflect the wishes of the people.

"And please don't forget that the mandate we have received from the people of West Pakistan is an overwhelming verdict . . . a massive mandate in favor of the People's Party, and in my favor."

Several days later, Bhutto's claim that the election results had shown power must be shared equally by the PPP and the Awami League prompted the latter to remind the PPP that the League was, in fact, the bigger party. The Awami League, said Secretary-General Taj Uddin Ahmed, felt competent to form a government "with or without cooperation from any other party."

Attitudes Altered

To be sure, there was also a hardening of attitude in the eastern wing after the elections. Six weeks after his landslide victory, Sheikh Mujib told his supporters to "bury alive anyone — including myself" who tried to ditch the principle of autonomy for East Pakistan.

Yet while Mujib spoke of autonomy in the political and economic fields (he wanted, for example, to resume trade ties with neighboring India), Bhutto repeatedly and publicly interpreted the Awami League stance as meaning that Pakistan's integrity was threatened.

Even President Yahya did not initially share this view: in January this year, after a meeting with the Sheikh in Dacca, he said he had "inherited a bad economy which I'm now going to pass on to Sheikh Mujib, the future prime minister of Pakistan."

Suddenly, in early March, Yahya dropped his admirably neutral stance and switched to Bhutto's side. Bhutto earlier had threatened to boycott the scheduled March 3 meeting of the national assembly.

In turn, Sheikh Mujib was demonstrating his power in the east by turning civil disobedience off and on at will.

Yahya's decision to side with Bhutto — or rather, to side against the Sheikh — was a classic case of reversion to the traditional and martial feeling of superiority over the docile Bengalis of the eastern wing.

It is evident that Yahya, a fair man, wanted equality of the two wings without regard to the fact that simple equality of power in the national assembly would slash away at the Sheikh's election win by artificially boosting the PPP's mandate.

Today, as India and Pakistan meet in war, the Awami League is banned and Sheikh Mujib imprisoned.

With the League safely out of the way, Bhutto since September has demanded "full and immediate" transfer of power from the military to the political parties — meaning, of course, his own PPP.

In the grim turn of events, it is relevant to recall a vow which Bhutto made in 1965: Pakistan, he said then, would wage war against India "for the next 1,000 years."

British Ran German Spy Network

Wartime Secrets Disclosed

Reuter, from New York

British intelligence penetrated and took over the German spy network in Britain during the Second World War and for four years used it against the Germans by feeding them a steady stream of false information, says a book to be published early in 1972.

The crowning achievement of this intelligence coup was to make the Germans believed the Allied invasion of Europe in June, 1944, would take place in the Calais area of northern France instead of in Normandy, where it actualy occurred.

Also as a result of this system of double agents, Britain and the United States in August, 1941, received a clear indication that Pearl Harbor would be the first target attacked in the event of American involvement in the war.

The significance of the information was not grasped, however, and the U.S. was unprepared when the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor less than four months later.

The story of these and other exploits is described in The Double-Cross System in the War of 1939 to 1945, by Sir John Masterman, a historian and former provost of Worcester College, Oxford, who played a major role in running the double-agent network.

The book was written in 1945, in the form of a top-secret report by Sir John, now 80 years old, on completion of his wartime intelligence work.

Only last month the British government gave permission to Yale University Press to publish the 198-page account. It is scheduled to appear simultaneously in the U.S. and Britain Feb. 16, 1972.

As a result of the D-Day deception, based on fictitious information about the size and location of Allied troop concentrations in Britain, the Germans stationed seven of their divisions in the Pas de Calais area and kept them there long after Allied troops stormed ashore in Normandy, much farther south.

The Germans were persuaded that the Normandy operation might be only a diversion and that another thrust could yet be launched in the Calais region.

Warning of the Pearl Harbor attack came when a double agent code-named Tricycle, a Yugoslav recruited by the Germans but actually on the Allied side, received a list of questions which the Germans wanted answered during a trip he was making to the U.S.

One third of the questionnaire dealt with Hawaii, and especially Pearl Harbor.

In the final year of the war, the double-cross system was used to mislead the Germans about the effects of their V-1 flying bomb and V-2 rocket attacks on London.

By exaggerating the number of bombs reported to have fallen north and west of London, and keeping silent, when possible, about those which landed south and east of the capital, the Germans were led to believe they were overshooting their target. As a result they shortened the range of the weapons, which then fell short of the target.

Throughout the book, the double agents are referred to by their code names. The agents' backgrounds and nationalities were varied. Some agreed to work for the British only as an alternative to being executed as Nazi spies. Others had become German agents with the intention of aiding the Allies.

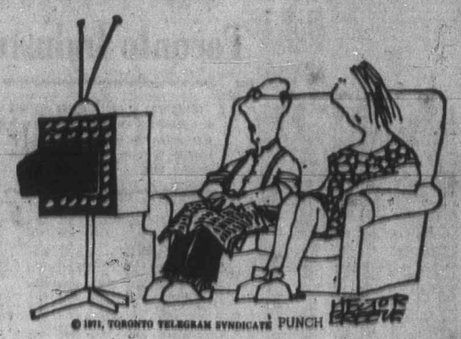
One of the first double agents was a man code-named Snow, an electrical engineer who emigrated as a youngster from Britain to Canada but returned to England a few years before the war.

He was a shadowy figure with links to both British and German intelligence and was arrested almost immediately after war broke out.

The system was actually launched when Snow, firmly under the control of British intelligence officers, sent a message to Germany on a radio set installed for him in his cell in Wandsworth Prison, London.



"I said: 'When are they going to put on a talk show that's as interesting as the conversations we have at home?'"

Alcan Grab By Guyana Backfires

By PENNY LERNOUX, from Georgetown, Guyana

Guyana's nationalization of Canadian-owned bauxite deposits has reaped few economic or political benefits for this small South American nation. Like the sugar plantations of Cuba and the nationalized copper mines of Marxist Chile, Guyanese takeover of the nation's primary mineral export industry has produced administrative inefficiency, lack of incentive for the worker and a corresponding drop in production.

Originally viewed by the government as an easy way to make points with the voters, nationalization of Alcan's large bauxite holdings turned out to be a double-edged sword. The state-owned Guyana Bauxite Co. (GUYBAU), set up to operate Alcan's Demba mines, is encountering serious problems with the workers' representatives who are demanding the entire Alcan pension fund be turned over to them. Worse, labor spokesmen claim "production has dropped incredibly low because the working zeal of the industrial workers and the administrative prowess of those in charge have gone down the drain."

Though perfectly true, the charges were made public at a most inauspicious time. The government had just appointed new marketing agents and was assuring overseas customers they could count on regular service.

Since bauxite earns 28 per cent of Guyana's foreign exchange and the Demba mines produce over four-fifths of that total, GUYBAU's problems could cause serious difficulties in a country already beset by widespread poverty and high, 20 per cent, unemployment.

Other money earners such as sugar and rice also are facing production difficulties because of frequent labor strikes.

Guyana, formerly British Guiana, has yet to overcome a heritage of hostility bequeathed it with independence in 1966.

Most of the country's current leaders can remember being snubbed as young colonials in England. "We will go as equals now," warned Prime Minister Forbes Burnham during independence celebrations.

A professed socialist, Burnham insisted the foreign-owned bauxite industry, like the earlier British sugar interests, had given the country little in return for what it had taken out.

Like most of Guyana's 750,000 inhabitants, Burnham was incensed at the foreigners' failure to construct a smelter to produce the finished product, aluminum, in Guyana instead of shipping the raw materials home.

A vain and ambitious man, Burnham nevertheless is an intelligent administrator and gifted politician.

Following a visit to copper-rich Zambia during an African tour, Burnham pressed Alcan for the same sort of gradual nationalization started by Zambia. He proposed Alcan sell 51 per cent of its Guyanese subsidiary to the government which would pay Alcan from future profits.

Alcan turned down the proposal, perhaps with the Chilean example in mind. Though U.S. copper interests agreed to a similar scheme with the previous Chilean government, President Salvador Allende nationalized them anyway.

Informed sources say Burnham really had no intention of seeking more than a majority control, particularly in view of the predictable problems in overseas marketing and local administration. "But when confronted with an either-or, he had no choice in the matter," said a foreign diplomat.

This may explain Burnham's hesitant attitude toward the Reynolds subsidiary which, though one-fifth the size of Alcan's Demba mines, still is foreign-owned (U.S.). Certainly, GUYBAU's difficulties are not conducive to further expropriations.

The biggest promoter of black power and leftist nationalism in the southern Caribbean, Burnham nevertheless is astute enough to realize that an economic recession will not help him in the next elections which must be held by December, 1973.

In a country long divided by racial prejudices between the Negroes and the East Indians, Burnham's trump card is his ability to demonstrate that he, a Negro, can achieve more prosperity and racial harmony than his chief opposition, Cheddi Jagan, an East Indian and avowed communist.

Ironically, the East Indians comprise the most conservative community in Guyana, and Burnham has found in the past that it is possible to wean such voters away from Jagan by emphasizing the difference between left and extreme left.

"It's been good of you, Jill, to stay with me all these years since the accident."

U.S. Dollar Recovers On German Move

LONDON (AP) — The United States dollar recovered from early weakness on European foreign exchanges Tuesday after the West German government said it would act to limit the dollar's decline.

The dollar was down sharply when the exchanges opened. The British pound rose above the $2.50 level for the first time since the 1967 devaluation of sterling.

The turnaround came with a statement by West German Economics Minister Karl Schiller that the state bank was setting limits below which the dollar-deutschemark exchange rate would not be allowed to go. Schiller did not indicate what the limit was.

The dollar opened in Frankfurt at a record low 3.2360 marks but had climbed back to 3.2675 marks by the close. This represented a 12.01-per-cent upward revaluation of the mark from parity.

The West German state bank, meanwhile, calculated that world currencies had increased in average value against the dollar by 5.4 per cent from May, 1970, when the Canadian dollar was allowed to float. The rate Monday was 5.2 per cent.

In Montreal, the Canadian dollar was at par with the U.S. dollar.

In London, the dollar was worth less than 40 British new pence for the first time since 1967. At the close, a dollar bought 39.96 pence, the equivalent of a rate of $2.50105 to one pound. This rate was 4.210-per-cent increase in the pound's value from parity.

TOWBOAT INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS ASSOCIATION

E. R. (ED) PECK

The Towboat Industrial Relations Association of British Columbia has appointed E. R. (Ed) Peck as its first president. Mr. Peck comes to TIRA from the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority where a successful and rewarding career led to his most recent position of Manager, Labour Relations, for the utility. For four years in the mid-60s, he was General Manager of Peace Power, and Columbia Hydro Constructors, responsible for the conduct of labour relations on the Peace and Columbia Power projects. With TIRA, his responsibilities will cover the broad field of labour relations between the towboat companies and the industry's three unions.

Montreal Market Could Be Busier

By GEORGE GIBSON
Colonist Business Editor

MONTREAL — It's big, beautifully designed but largely unused. That's the main impression gathered in a recent visit to the building that houses the Canadian and Montreal Stock Exchanges.

Both exchanges were brought together under one fancy roof in 1965. The Canadian exchange is the speculative wing, mostly mining stocks and junior industrials, while the Montreal exchange is the trading centre for the more established stocks.

Transactions are handled electronically in this most modern of trading floors. It's so highly developed that a trade can be shown as completed and the fact confirmed in a broker's office just seconds after the phone order was made.

Unfortunately, at the moment there just isn't enough activity even among the speculative issues to make all this high-speed capability seem forthwhile, outside of the fact that there is a high accuracy achievement. Capacity is rated 100 times more than is required on the busiest day recorded so far.

And while it's a struggle, things can be said to be looking up for the Montreal markets. Two years ago they handled only 15 per cent of the share volume in the nation-wide picture and by the end of 1970 had pushed that percentage to 20. Toronto, the leader, has 40 per cent.

On dollar value, Montreal rose from 18.9 per cent in 1969 to 22.6 per cent in 1970. Toronto rose from 66.8 per cent to 68.5 in the same period. Comparing the number of listings at the end of 1970 shows 897 for the Canadian and Montreal combined and 1,177 for Toronto, going into 1970.

Listings on the Montreal and Canadian exchanges increased to 963 at the midpoint of this year, with most of the new ones in the Canadian sector. But this number declined until there were only 881 at the end of October.

The instability of number of listings is a cause of considerable concern in Quebec investment circles. Two years ago the province made it easier for promoters to sell stocks through the Canadian exchange.

The chairman of the Canadian exchange stands suspended at this writing and some are laying the blame for the problem on the Quebec Securities Commission, saying that it has neither the bite nor the staff to cope with what now are said to be inevitable abuses with the relaxation of rules.

Last of a two-part series

How much abuse that has occurred remains to be proven, but there have been some wild fluctuations in prices on the Canadian exchange.

Harry Andrews, the Canadian chairman who was suspended from office, is also a partner in a brokerage firm that has underwritten some of the more volatile stocks and one of his staff members has been linked to underworld figures.

It's the kind of stuff that shakes investor confidence.

Those around the exchange building felt another kind of shock back on Feb. 14, 1969, and still haven't quite gotten over it.

We refer to the time bomb explosion that injured 27 people and did $600,000 worth of damage centred on the visitors' gallery.

Security, since that date, is a word with a sharper meaning around the black-glass stock exchange tower at Victoria Square. And there's nobody who regrets the situation more than the exchange officials.

The blast, which took place just 10 minutes from closing time, was laid to an extremist named Jean Paul Jeffrois, then 21, who now is serving a life sentence. Other explosions were blamed on him as well and he was apprehended in a room full of explosives.

However, exchange public relations officer Charles Stanbury — a Victoria native son incidentally — said that the trading floor was back in operation by 11 a.m. on the day following the explosion.

Furthermore, he would like to make it clear that the exchange still welcomes visitors, provided that they make prior arrangements in writing. He stated that an average of 600 people per week visit the gallery in group tours.

But guards at the front door, a common sight in most Montreal office buildings, are a disconcerting sight to the visitor from the west coast.

'Important, Not Grave'

MONTREAL (UPI) — Quebec Financial Institutions Minister William Tetley said Tuesday that an investigation into Montreal's securities industry has turned up evidence of "important, but not grave" irregularities.

"My reports on the investigation are still only preliminary but I can say that so far we've found irregularities, but no evidence of any widespread Mafia or underworld infiltration," Tetley said. "The situation is important but not grave."

Tetley said, however, that "we may have to lift the licence" of one stock brokerage firm that is among two companies being probed.

The minister said that he had also received a preliminary report on a separate inquiry being conducted by auditors of the Montreal and Canadian stock exchanges into the operations of Holland, Andrews, Perrier and Co. Ltd.

"The auditors have reported verbally to me that the firm is quite solvent," Tetley said. "That eases one major worry — what's going to happen to the public."

Gas Proposal Deadline Set

All prospective applicants for the right to build a pipeline to supply natural gas to Vancouver Island until Dec. 29 to file notice of their intention, the Public Utilities Commission has ruled.

The PUC states that a "pre-hearing conference" is scheduled for sometime in January at which firms interested in the project will exchange information gathered in feasibility studies as well as discuss procedures for the formal hearing later in 1972.

The hearing, which isn't expected to be held before spring and may be delayed much longer than that, could hear up to half a dozen applications for the right to build the pipeline to serve Powell River and Island centres.

Among the bidders on the original proposal was B.C. Hydro, which later said it would not appear before the commission as an intervenor. Under the new set-up, however, it is expected the crown corporation may reconsider its position and make formal application for the right to build the line.

Hydro's proposal, using a southern rout, quoted a price roughly half that of Malaspina Gas Pipeline Ltd. for the line from Williams Lake to the Island via Powell River. The latter route was specified by the government in its original invitation for proposals, but the ground rules were later changed to allow Hydro's suggested route to be considered.

Premier Bennett and Resources Minister Ray Williston, who is a Hydro director, both said Tuesday it would be up to B.C. Hydro chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum to decide whether the crown corporation renew its formal application for a permit to build the pipeline.

Heisman Trophy Needs Votes, Not Touchdowns

By JIM MURRAY

LOS ANGELES (LAT) — The subject for today is the Heisman Trophy, one of the great political contests in American history. You get the Heisman Trophy the same way you get the Democratic nomination. You don't need touchdowns so much as you need delegates.

The public has the notion the Heisman Trophy is awarded annually to the best football player in the universe, but you have to remember that most of these people were brought up to believe in Santa Claus, the gold standard, and the AP All-American.

The pros put the thing in its proper ludicrous perspective when they take the Heisman player at the draft meeting just before they put the lights out, and then they assign him to the suicide units breaking up kickoff wedges. The transparency of the awards may be seen in the fact no lineman has ever won it. The bankruptcy of the award may be seen in the fact Jim Brown never won it. Nor did Gale Sayers. But Billy Cannon, Joe Bellino and Terry Baker did.

The unfortunate part of it is, it comes full of money. A Heisman Trophy winner can command more at the pro bargaining table no matter what his on-field inadequacies. On the off chance he may be able to field punts or hold point-after-touchdown tries, the pros up the ante for the publicity value they can get out of this presence in camp. They take it out of the cut they would otherwise have to give the linebacker from Grambling who will be making tackles for them for 15 years.

The voting is strictly along regional lines. In past years, when I had to vote (I guess I forfeited it by not voting), I have been importuned by sportswriter friends in other parts of the country to vote for a young man whose name I could not spell, and whose position I did not know — except to be sure he was in a backfield some place. Even after I lost the vote, I was called by pals east of the Mississippi to research a column on a contender of their choice who was being shut out because his conference had two candidates cancelling each other out to the benefit of a headline player in another part of the country where the writers had formed a united front.

The whole things smacks of a Woodrow Wilson-Champ Clark nominating convention. I expect it to get worse. Any year now, I can foresee a situation where, let's say, the south comes up with two bona fide candidates. An informal caucus will be held in a Birmingham press box, sort of like a New Hampshire primary. The weight of the southeast will be sampled and then thrust — unanimously — behind one candidate. The resident Mark Hanna or Jim Farley will be dispatched to the loser's campus to advise the publicist to withdraw his brochures or at his least his Monday morning broadsides. The judgment of the machine will outweigh the sentiment of the individual. It will all be handled the way Mayor Daley would handle it.

Actually the Heisman Trophy used to have overtones of Dink Stover, Frank Merriwell and the Rover Boys implicit in it. The guy who won it was not necessarily the leading ground-gainer or total-offense leader, he was the guy who helped the most little old ladies across the street, fought communism, took up the collection in chapel, or had not been brought up recently on paternity suits. It was nice that he led the conference in passing, but not necessary. He could even be known for his blocking. The University of Chicago won the first Heisman. Yale won two of the first three, and hasn't won since. In fact, the Ivy League has won only one other since.

What's next? Well, billboards I suppose, TV spots. Trading off votes from one year to the next. Log-rolling, ballot-stuffing, jerrymandering.

Maybe we can just get all the candidates to show up in Atlantic City in their bathing suits. Or, we could adopt the electoral college system which would make it possible not only for the worst player to win but the guy with the least votes. That's, after all, the democratic way. Personally, I would just as soon give it to the guy who led the nation in fumbles.

Runner-Up Puts On Show for Camera

Ed Marinaro, Cornell's record-breaking runner, wasn't at all happy with decision which gave Heisman Trophy to Pat Sullivan but disappointment was hidden when the two posed for cameraman prior to taping of part in television show set for Thursday. Marinaro, who averaged 174.6 yards rushing for his three seasons of college football and set career rushing record of 4715 yards, is shown following orders by grabbing the lapels of the happy Auburn University quarterback, who has B.C. Lions of the Canadian Football League interested in getting his signature on contract. —(AP)

Home Stand, Return of Stars Puts It On Line for Cougars

If Victoria Cougars are ever going to move up in the Western Canada Hockey League standings, now is the time.

An unlucky club away from home and further hampered by a gruelling schedule and a lineup which has been unsettled because of trades and injuries, the Cougars have managed only one point from their 18 road games.

But starting tonight at Memorial Arena, where they are even for the season with five wins and a tie in 11 games, the Cougars are home for 11 of their next 15 games and do not have to venture further afield than the Mainland for the other four, playing twice in Vancouver and twice in New Westminster.

And they should have a settled lineup which figures to become more effective with the chance to practice together. And with Garry Donaldson, their sparkplug forward due to return to the lineup tonight against New Westminster Bruins and Murray Worley, perhaps their steadiest defenceman, a possible starter, club fortunes could start looking up.

Cougars will need their best if they are to start a surge tonight. The Bruins were rated by many as pre-season favorites in the Western Division. They got away slowly, due in large part to the injury which deprived them of Lorne Henning, their highly-rated captain, but they have shown recent signs of living up to expectations and will be seeking to improve their playoff standing.

Bruins have won both previous games between the teams, but one was a 4-3 squeaker at Memorial Arena, where the Cougars own victories over Calgary Centennials and Medicine Hat Tigers and a tie with Edmonton Oil Kings.

However, Henning, who leads his club with 22 points from the 13 games he has played, is steadily regaining his form after a bout with jaundice and the Bruins figure to be tougher this time.

Fans tonight will see something new in that all players on both clubs, in accordance with a league rule which went into effect on Dec. 1, will be wearing helmets.

KINGS ON TOP

Only two games were played Tuesday night, one in each division. In Edomonton, the Oil Kings regained the Western Division lead by besting Brandon Wheat Kings, 7-4, while Regina Pats moved within two points of the Eastern Division lead with a 6-3 home-ice win over Flin Flon Bombers.

John Rogers broke it open for the Oil Kings, scoring twice in the second period after Brandon had surged to a 3-3 tie.

Terry Smith, Dave Inkpen, Don Kozak, Darcy Rota and Marcel Comeau got the other Edmonton goals.

Don McLaughlin and Grant Thompson both scored twice for the Manitobans.

Jim Tang

There's no telling how many world records have been set or how many Olympic championships have been won by athletes given a boost by the use of stimulating drugs, but it is a fair assumption that it has happened often. The policing which has been a result of the increasing use of drugs in athletics has undoubtedly had some effect, and could if stringently enough applied make it almost negligible. But it may not be necessary much longer because it seems there is a more effective and undetectable method of providing stimulation to bring accomplishment much above normal capabilities.

That's a reasonable assumption to make from the findings of Swedish physiologist Bjorn Ekblom in an experiment which Sports Illustrated, in what is almost certainly understatement, says "might prove to be the most revolutionary in sports history."

In furthering his study of the oxygen transport system in the human body, Ekblom tested seven students on a treadmill to determine their maximum energy capability. Then he extracted about 20 per cent of their blood, about twice the amount normally taken from a blood donor, and stored it while continuing to use the treadmill for the students.

They showed some lassitude at first but their bodies soon replenished the blood supply and they were back to normal in about two weeks. Two weeks after that, Ekblom returned the stored blood to their bodies. The results that brought were startling and could have far-reaching effects on every sport.

Students reported an amazing rise in energy after the transfusions which temporarily gave them an over-supply of their own blood.

"It was a fantastic feeling," one of them said, "almost as if you were boiling over with energy.

Testing showed that physical performance levels rose to 20 per cent beyong previous maximums.

Perhaps the easiest-to-understand explanation was offered by Dr. George Sheehan, a marathon-running American internist.

"What he (Ekblom) is doing is raising the oxygen-carrying capacity something on the order of 10 to 12 per cent."

Ekblom says that the study was solely for the purpose of finding out more about the oxygen transport system but admits that he is "frightened at the possibilities of its use within sport."

The possibilities are certainly there. Although the body would soon readjust its blood supply to normal and thus return energy to normal, it would not be difficult to prepare athletes or, as Sports Illustrated pointed out, even race horses for a special event. The three-minute mile may be only a transfusion away, marathons might be run in less than two hours and something like Furious Benny could win the Kentucky Derby and no one could be sure that there had been a form of stimulation.

"I had been collecting notes for years and they were beginning to pile up. She finally declared that either the notes would go or she would. Well, she's a good cook and the kids like her, so I wrote the book and threw the notes away."

Crediting, or perhaps blaming his wife for it is the lighthearted way Doug McConnell explains "There's More To Hockey," his lighthearted book about what he terms "the characters who inhabit the Western Hockey League."

There's More To Hockey is really a collection of anecdotes put down in no particular order and tending to prove the author's belief that "hockey is a game, it's not a serious business."

McConnell gathered his notes over years of reporting WHL action as a Phoenix sportswriter, and it is evident that his ear was always tuned for the humorous.

Most of the players and officials who get mention are well known to Vancouver Island sports fans, and among those who performed for Victoria teams are Sandy "The Bear" Hucul; Bob "Blah Blah" Barlow; Ed Dorohoy; Hal Laycoe; Milan Marcetta; Lou Jankowski; Gerry Goyer; Dick Lamoureaux, who became known as "Shag" because of the hair-cutting service he performed for teammates, and Aut Erickson, who became "Mr. Spock" after availing himself to Lamoureux' services. Ed Ehrenverth gets a merited chapter as one of hockey's finest wits and Rudy Pilous earned mention because he fell asleep while hosting reporters in his hotel room and didn't wake up until the playback of a tape of his snoring.

Not every anecdote hits the spot but it's the kind of reading that ardent fans relish and has much that would be amusing to the more casual fan. It's in a good-quality paper-back edition and it can be obtained by sending $1.75, which includes the handling charge of 25 cents, to Panoramic Press Inc., P.O. Box 13473, Phoenix, Arizona 85002.

VANCOUVER — Vancouver Canucks slowed the surging St. Louis Blues Tuesday night, getting solid goalkeeping from Dunc Wilson to score a 2-1 decision in the only scheduled National Hodkey League action.

Blues, who had gone 5-3-3 since their multi-player deal with New York Rangers to move into a third-place tie in the West Division, got their goal in the third minute of play, then came up short offensively as the Canucks went by and hung on for the points.

Fred Speck, getting his first goal of the season, tied the score midway through the first period when he banged the puck in after Jim McLeod had failed to hold a drive by Dale Tallon.

Dave Balon, a recent Canuck acquisition from the Rangers, stepped out of the penalty box in the second period, taking a pass from Andre Boudrias and whistling the puck past McLeod from close-in range.

Victory was a costly one for Canucks. Defenceman Barry Wilkins suffered a badly-dislocated shoulder when taking a third-period check and is expected to be out of action for about two months.

Track Official Testifies In Sandown Fraud Trial

If the filly Music Melody had been running in the seventh race at Sandown Park Aug. 21 instead of the filly Last Note, the betting patterns of the race would have been changed, the presiding steward of the Sandown meet said Tuesday.

The Steward, Gerald Milburn, was testifying at the second day of the Victoria County Court judge-and-jury trial of David Robert Baxter of Vancouver.

Baxter is charged with fraud in connection with the substitution of a horse in the seventh race Aug. 21, and crown counsel Brian Smith said earlier the crown would try to show that Music Melody was substituted for the horse Baxter had entered in the race — Last Note.

Milburn told court that in his opinion, had Music Melody been entered in the race, the odds on her would have been much shorter than the odds on Last Note.

The reason for this, he said, was that Music Melody had a much better past racing record, having won six races while Last Note had not won any.

Milburn said that Baxter had asked him if he needed to bring the registration papers of a horse he had just bought if he wished to race the horse, and Milburn had told him he did.

FOUL CLAIMED

After the race, the jockey on the horse listed as Last Note claimed a foul against the winning horse, and while the stewards were investigating the claim, Baxter came to the room where they were viewing the videotape of the race.

Milburn said Baxter was "excited and anxious" about the race result, but left the viewing room when asked to do so.

Under cross-examination by defence counsel Paul Delaney, the steward said that as far as he knew, no one from the B.C. Racing Commission or other racing officials had asked Baxter for an explanation of the circumstances surrounding the race.

He had not mentioned the investigation of the race to Baxter when he had seen him later in Vancouver, he said, because he no longer had any official capacity with the commission.

OWNER TESTIFIES

Walter Gilkey, racehorse owner and trainer from Richmond, testified that on the morning of Aug. 21, he had been asked by Baxter to trailer a horse from Richmond to Sandown for him, and had done so.

On the ferry Baxter had told him the horse was Last Note, and had shown him her past performance record, he said.

Robert Scott Maclean, a 16-year-old boy from Richmond who helps his father train horses, told Judge M. L. T. Drake and the 12-member jury that he had seen Baxter drive onto the ferry in a truck with a horse-trailer attached.

When he looked at the trailer, the back of it was shut up, but through a dark glass panel at the front, he could see a horse's head, he said.

Under cross-examination, he said he could not remember the exact date when this happened, but one of the investigating officers had told him it.

BREEDER ON STAND

Earlier in the day, the breeder of Last Note, Mrs. Joan Hess, had described the filly to the court and had identified some pictures of her.

The filly, she said, had no white markings anywhere on her, but did have a scar on her forehead as the result of a shipping accident in June.

After watching the videotape of the race, she said she thought the horse which appeared to be the horse listed in the program as Last Note had a white star on its forehead.

If this was so, she said, the horse was not Last Note.

Mrs. Hess said she had sold the filly to Baxter three days before the race in question.

The trial continues this afternoon.

Exemption Prize In Bahama Open

FREEPORT (CP-AP) — George Knudson, touring pro from Toronto, will be among several veterans eyeing this week's $130,000 Bahama Islands Open golf tournament with somewhat more than passing interest.

With most of the big names passing up the tournament, interest will be focused on the fight for a spot on 1972's exemption list, made up of this year's top 60 money-winners on the PGA tour.

Knudson is in the group of those ranked 56th to 66th that has entered this tournament in an effort to avoid having to play qualifying rounds for regular tournaments. Knudson, 62nd on the list, has earned $40,032 this year.

Other veterans looking for a spot on the exempt list are Dick Lotz, Jim Jamieson, Bob Smith, Jim Colbert, George Johnson, Terry Dill, Larry Ziegler, R. H. Sikes and Bert Greene.

Jack Nicklaus, Lee Trevino and Arnold Palmer resolved the fight for the leading money-winning spot and all three are skipping the last event on the pro tour this season.

Court Injunction Frees Youngsters

TORONTO (CP) — An injunction, issued here Monday by Mr. Justice Patrick Galligan, will allow two 16-year-olds to play for a hockey team in Sudbury, at least until Jan. 5.

The injunction, against the Northern Ontario Hockey Association, was an interim order restraining the NOHA from suspending either the players or the team.

The players, Tony Rennett and Mickey Hansen, live in Lively, 15 miles west of Sudbury, and want to play midget hockey in Sudbury.

The NOHA had ruled they must play for a midget team in Copper Cliff, the nearest community to their homes, with a team in their age group. Copper Cliff is five miles west of Sudbury.

The boys played bantam hockey in Sudbury for two years after failing to make the Copper Cliff team. They played midget hockey in Sudbury last year when Copper Cliff did not sponsor a team.

This year, midget hockey returned to Copper Cliff and that community's athletic association claimed the two players.

The NOHA ruled that Rennett and Hansen would have to play at Copper Cliff unless the athletic association voluntarily gave them their release. The association granted the releases last Friday, after the players announced they were seeking the injunction.

"I'm going to ask the NOHA not to fight the case," said Walter Denniston, vice-president of the NOHA and convenor for the Sudbury area. "Copper Cliff claimed them, according to the rules, but that is no reason to keep the boys out of hockey."

Del Rice Named To Manage Angels

ANAHEIM (AP) — Del Rice, who spent 21 years in major league baseball as a catcher and coach, Tuesday was named manager of the California Angels of the American League.

The appointment of the 49-year-old Rice for a one-year term was in the nature of a reward for leading three California farm clubs to championships in successive seasons. He succeeds Harold "Lefty" Phillips, who was dismissed along with general-manager Dick Walsh after a strife-filled season.

Rice, who was a catcher for 17 of his major league seasons, managed Salt Lake City to a 78-68 showing this past season, winning the Southern Division title in the Pacific Coast League and then besting Tacoma in the playoffs.

He also won championships with farm clubs at San Jose and El Paso and has never had worse than a third-place club in his minor-league managerial career.

Rice played with St. Louis Cardinals from 1945 to 1955 and was later with Chicago Cubs, Baltimore Orioles and Los Angeles Angels as a player. He was a coach with the Angels from 1962 to 1966 and then accepted a coaching job with Cleveland Indians before going to the minor leagues to manage.

Selection as CFL All-Star Caps Jonas' Standout Season

MONTREAL (CP) — Don Jonas of Winnipeg Blue Bombers, earlier named Canada's outstanding football player of 1971, Tuesday was named all-Canada quarterback on the all-star team picked by the Football Reporters of Canada.

On the offensive team announced by FRC president Pierre Proulx, the Bombers dominated, placing five men. No other team placed more than two. Ottawa Rough Riders, Hamilton Tiger-Cats and Edmonton Eskimos were shut out.

The Grey Cup-winning Calgary Stampeders and the Argonauts, won four places each on the defensive team with the other four berths going to Hamilton, Ottawa, Montreal and Edmonton.

Winnipeg, British Columbia Lions and Saskatchewan Roughriders failed to place a man on the defensive team.

Voting was carried out prior to the Grey Cup game.

Over-all, the Western Football Conference teams placed 14 players offensively and defensively, compared to 10 for the EFC.

Toronto Argonauts, with two offensive players and four from the defensive squad, had the greatest single representation. Calgary tied Winnipeg with five — one offensive player and four on defence. All the Winnipeg stars were on offence.

There were no unanimous selections, although Leon McQuay, with 46 out of 47 votes, came closest. Wayne Harris, chosen earlier as Canada's top lineman, got 42 votes as a middle linebacker and two at cornerback.

Jonas was in good company as two of his favorite receivers made the squad — young Bob LaRose at flanker and Jim Thorpe at split end.

EASY WINNER

Toronto's Jim Corrigall was the big choice at defensive end, picking up 27 votes to 11 for Craig Koinzan of Calgary, the runner-up.

The quarterback voting was split three ways — Jonas got 32 votes to 11 for rookie Joe Theismann of Toronto and four for Ron Lancaster of Saskatchewan.

Bobby Could Get Million Dollars

WINNIPEG (CP) — Ben Hatskin, owner of the Winnipeg Jets franchise in the new World Hockey Association says he has obtained the WHA rights to Bobby Hull of the Chicago Black Hawks.

Hatskin, who talked with the Chicago forward last weekend in Vancouver, said he will meet with Hull again this weekend in Toronto.

The Winnipeg owner has said he would be willing to offer Hull a five-year contract for $1 million.

The WHA clubs each drafted four NHL players at a meeting 10 days ago but Hatskin said he will not reveal the names of the other three players he has secured WHA rights to.

The WHA draft works the same as the NHL junior draft, giving each club rights to certain players and preventing other teams in the league from attempting to sign players not on their list. The WHA will draft all professional players at a meeting scheduled for next monts.

Totems Open New Season With Victory

Victoria Totems, who tied with Belmont for first place last season, opened their 1971-72 campaign in the Victoria Senior Boys High School Basketball League Tuesday with a 55-24 victory over Claremont.

Claremont, a new entry in the legue this season, dropped a 45-35 decision to Esquimalt, who shared the basement with Mount View at the end of last season, in the first league game last Friday.

Kevin Townsend, with 18 points, topped the scoring for the Totems, who led only 13-11 after the first quarter but outscored Claremont, 19-1, in the second quarter to lead, 32-12 at half time.

If you have any ecology tips to pass along to other outdoorsmen we would like to hear about them.

One of our pet peeves is the number of plastic bags thrown overboard to drift around on the surface of the water. They never rot, they foul up the beaches, and they get tangled in lines and around propellers. Keep your plastic bags and dispose of them when you get home, and that includes the plastic around your frozen bait.

Dick Kotis, who makes the Fred Arbogast lures which are so deadly on small-mouth bass, has come up with a list of his pet eco-tips for fishermen, and I pass them along in the hope that they will be noted by the people who use the outdoors.

Pick up the old monofilament line you find outdoors, because birds and small mammals become entangled in it and die.

Never allow your boat gas tank to overflow and pollute the water.

Pick up film packs. Some cause wildlife poisoning.

Metal tabs from drink cans, and plastic carriers for holding packs together are hazards for wildlife that swallow them or become entabled in them.

Keep a litterbag in your boat, and use it. Don't throw anything in the water except your lures.

The shooting in the woods is over for another year and when the harvest is tallied it almost certainly will be recorded as an excellent year for the hunters.

Bow and arrow shooters have the deer all to themselves on Vancouver Island this week, with Dec. 6 to 12 inclusive reserved for archers.

Blue grouse are no longer legal game, but ruffled (willow) grouse stay in season until Jan. 9. And now that most of the leaves have fallen, hunters should be able to find the willows in the wooded areas.

Ducks and geese remain in season until Jan. 9, but brant shooters are reminded that this year on Vancouver Island, brant will be in season only from Mar. 1 to Mar. 10. Reason for not opening brant season on the Island on Dec. 25 as is the case elsewhere in B.C. is that biologists hope a delay in the season opening may encourage a revival of the early-arriving brant, which used to come to Vancouver Island shores, some of them taking up year-round residence.

Parksville Fish and Game Club has petitioned the department of transport for more launching rampfacilities at the French Creek boat basin.

"As this is one of the few public launching ramps adjacet to the good fishing areas off Eaglecrest it encounters tremendous use from Nanaimo, Port Alberni, Victoria, Courtenay and the lower mainland, as well as Parksville and Qualicum Beach areas," the club notes in a letter to the DOT.

"Cars with boat trailers are lined up along the entrance road to the marina as far back as the main highway, causing a traffic hazard and a delay in launching of up to an hour or longer.

"With only a single ramp for launching, it is woefully inadequate to handle this kind of pressure.

"We therefore request, as users of this facility, that the present ramp be extended to accommodate three launchings at one time, which we feel sure would alleviate this situation," the letter states.

If anything the Parksville Club is under-stating its case.

I personally saw this congestion last summer during the height of the fishing season.

We had pulled into French Creek, selected a campsite, and then took a look at the launching ramp.

One look at the congestion was enough for us. We forgot about camping at French Creek and headed for less congested places. We just couldn't pictures ourselves waiting that long to put a boat in the water.

Launching facilities for such an ideal spot as French Creek Boat Basin are hopelessly inadequate and I hope the Parksville Club gets the much-needed additional ramps.

Arbutus edged arch rival Oak Bay, 15-11, 15-11, Tuesday to take first place in the Victoria Junior High School Boys Volleyball League round-robin playoff finals.

The schools had been tied for top spot at the end of the league schedule but Oak Bay was declared league champion on the result of the game between them.

With third-place Reynolds and fourth-place S. J. Willis, Arbutus and Oak Bay entered the playoffs, which began last Tursday.

On the first day, Arbutus beat both Reynolds and S. J. Willis; Oak Bay downed Reynolds; and S. J. Willis defeated Oak Bay.

Reynolds defeated S. J. Willis, 10-15, 15-11, 15-5, as the round-robin play ended Tuesday but the result left three schools in a tie with one win each.

In a sudden-death round-robin decider, S. J. Willis defeated Oak Bay, 15-13, and Reynolds, 15-10, to take second place.

Oak Bay downed Reynolds, 15-5, to take third place.

Zone Champions Start Thursday

Zone winners from centres all over the province will take part in the four-day British Columbia Centennial badminton tournament which opens at the Racquet Club Thursday.

Five open events — men's and women's singles and doubles and mixed doubles — will be held in the competition, which will provide a valuable warm-up for players competing in the B.C. badminton championships in Kelowna from Feb. 18 to 21.

Only Victoria players will be involved in the opening-day matches, which start at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

But on Friday night zone champions from as far away as Dawson Creek, Prince George and Port Clements in the Queen Charlotte Islands will compete. Many other areas, including the Okanagan, the Fraser Valley and Greater Vancouver, will be represented.

Games will be played all day Saturday with the semi-finals Sunday morning and finals Sunday afternoon.

Jenkins Tops in Six Departments

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Ferguson Jenkins, the National League's Cy Young Award winner, led the league's pitchers in six departments in a busy 1971 baseball season.

The official statistics released Tuesday show that the Chicago Cubs right-hander from Chatham, Ont., had the most victories, 24; tied with Bill Stoneman of Montreal Expos for most starts with 39; had the most complete games, 30; and hurled the most innings, 325.

He also gave up the most hits, 304, and home runs 29.

New York's Tom Seaver repeated as the league's earned-run average leader and strike-out king.

The Mets ace recorded a 1.76 ERA finishing well ahead of runner-up Dave Roberts of San Diego Padres, 2.10. Seaver broke his own league record for strikeouts in a season by a righthander by fanning 289.

Seaver, 20-10 this year, had a 2.81 ERA and 283 strikeouts the previous season.

Wayne Granger of Cincinnati Reds was the league's most frequently used relief pitcher, with 70 appearances. Dave Giusti of Pittsburgh Pirates had the most saved from the bullpen, 30.

Dock Ellis of the champion Pirates had the longest winning streak, with 13 straight victories between May 2 and July 17.

Money, Trade

denounced Trudeau for, in effect, asking Washington for permission to design the Canadian destiny. That was humiliating for Canada and Canadians, he said.

In Washington, John Petty, assistant treasury secretary for international affairs, commented that it may be too much to expect the currency and surtax issues to be settled and wrapped up before Christmas, "but January is not far away."

No hard-and-fast agreements came out publicly from a two-hour Trudeau-Nixon session late Monday afternoon, a simultaneous meeting of finance and trade ministers and their officials, or a White House banquet that followed.

However, Trudeau said he gained the impression that a solution for the international exchange-rate crisis would be agreed on at a Washington meeting Dec. 17-18, or at the latest in January.

The U.S. 10-per-cent surtax on imports, imposed Aug. 16, would be withdrawn immediately afterwards, he predicted.

On so-called "irritants" in U.S.-Canada trade, Canadian officials have tentatively planned to return to Washington next Monday to negotiate detailed changes in such matters as trade in motor vehicles, defence equipment and uranium and regulations governing tourist buying in each country and other customs and tariff practices.

Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin, who with U.S. Commerce Secretary Maurice Stans took part in the Washington talks, told the Commons that detailed bargaining would involve "a balance package of irritants," but he declined to disclose what specific changes are being offered or sought.

"We'll make certain concessions, but we'll use the occasion to get the Americans to make certain concessions to us," Trudeau said at the Washington press conference.

The prime minister told the Commons that the U.S. leaders "want Canada to do more" in adjusting the exchange rate of its dollar — a reference to pressure from Connally to peg the Canadian dollar so that it would be worth more than U.S. currency.

Finance Minister E. J. Benson has resisted the U.S. proposal, arguing that the Canadian dollar, fluctuating in response to market forces for 18 months and currently near parity with the U.S. dollar, should continue to float freely on international markets.

An increase in the exchange value of the Canadian dollar, fixed at 92½ U.S. cents before June 1, 1970, makes Canadian goods more expensive abroad and harder to sell on export.

The U.S. is seeking a revaluation of other currencies that would give its products a better price break on world markets and help cure a chronic deficit in international transactions.

On longer-term U.S. intentions towards world trading patterns, the prime minister quoted Connally as saying that the aim was a return to freer trade.

At his Washington News conference, Trudeau said Connally was seeking an overall trade balance with all trading partners rather than trying to turn a perennial deficit into a continuous surplus.

"He just thought that they should be in deficit with some and surplus with others so that their over-all position in the world was one of balance," Trudeau said of the U.S. secretary, who has led the campaign for a realignment of trade and currency patterns.

Trudeau singled out as the most important result of his trip the president's assurance that the U.S. does not want to dominate Canada economically or politically, accidentally or by design.

He said he asked the president a precise question on whether "Canada is a place where you will always want to have a surplus trade balance in order that you will be able to export capital to Canada . . ."

He said the president replied no, and recalled that the U.S. had been dependent on European capital before the First World War and wanted to free itself of that dependence.

The prime minister said the president assured him the U.S. would do nothing that would make Canada feel like a colony.

Asked how the president's assurance might affect the government's policy on foreign ownership of Canadian industry, due to be published officially soon, Trudeau said there were no plans to rework that policy.

He added that the president's assurance would let Canadians discuss the foreign-ownership issue with less fear about a hostile U.S. reaction.

Harry Hyrax Wants To Go Home

It's not a rat, a cat or a marmot. It's a hyrax.

Some people might think a hyrax is a sort of rodent that lives in tall buildings. But it's not — really.

It's a mammal that comes from Africa and about 10 million years ago it was a relation of the elephant and the rhino.

The hyrax is an adventurous breed, or so it seems from one member of the group who lives in Saanichton.

This particular hyrax is very fond of people and also of wandering about.

The hyrax in question took off last week from its home at Newman Road where it shares premises with biologist Ted Bergerud.

At the animal shelter Tuesday the itinerant hyrax was dining on rabbit food and water, waiting to be picked up by its owner.

Poor Landing Job Cited as Factor In Airplane Crash

A poor landing approach by the pilot has been linked as a contributing factor in the Nov. 25 light plane crash which killed a Victoria RCMP officer.

President of the Courtenay Airpark Association, Eric Franklin, made this charge in a letter to Courtenay city council Tuesday.

"We believe that the high load factor on a low performance aircraft . . . under marginal weather conditions for the type of operation, were imminent factors contributing to the crash," Franklin said.

Franklin told Courtenay council in his letter that several witnesses had told the airpark association that the approach configuration of the aircraft was bad — "that is airspeed low, glide path too low, too much flap extended, power was not applied until the approach was badly undershot."

He also charged in the letter that the pilot had been "very inexperienced" but did not say on what information the association based the claim.

RCMP Constable Michael Robert Mason, 29, of 1245 Lyall, Esquimalt, was killed in the afternoon crash in which a Cessna 172 plunged upside down into the Courtenay River.

The plane's pilot, Victoria police Detective-Constable James Macdonald, 27, of 10221 Almond, Sidney, was seriously hurt in the crash and two other Victoria area policemen were injured.

Early reports said that the plane had struck a tree before crashing into the river but Franklin said investigations led the association to believe that this was not so.

All that could be found, he said, was one tree, a "spindly cedar" which was apparently struck by the plane's undercarriage, probably not impairing the aircraft's flight.

In defence of the Courtenay airpark, Franklin said that a fly-in earlier this year by more than 30 aircraft "in weather almost as deteriorated as on the day of the accident" was accomplished without incident. He added that comments from transport department, RCMP, and Canadian Forces about the airpark had always been favorable.

Franklin said he believed criticism of the airpark was made in order to publicly criticize the Canadian Forces Base at Comox for refusing to give landing clearance for the Cessna shortly before it crashed.

"This is normal procedure for aircraft without prior permission and not reporting an emergency," he said.

Franklin claimed that the Victoria chapter of the Canadian Aircraft Owners and Pilots' Association "have been conducting a vendetta with the Canadian Armed Forces for several years."

Victoria police said at the time of the crash, that pilot Macdonald was an experienced flyer . . . "an excellent pilot who won high praise for a recent job of shadowing-by-air above Victoria."

Courtenay council received and filed Franklin's letter without comment.

Mayor Courtney Haddock told the Colonist Tuesday night that he was deeply shocked.

"He was a hardworking and conscientious alderman. We are all saddened and shocked with his loss," said Haddock.

A byelection will likely be held early in the new year to fill the unexpired portion of Baird's two-year term. The alderman was elected in December, 1970. Under the Municipal Act, a nominations deadline must be set for a date within the next 30 to 45 days.

'Tis the Season for Thieves

Stores Shoplifters' Haven

By GEORGE INGLIS
Colonist Reporter

Christmas is the season of goodwill and also the season when shoplifters, amateur and professional, young and old, descend on gaily-decorated and busy stores.

"They come from every walk of life and they have some pretty fancy reasons for doing what they have done," the store protection chief of one Victoria department store, who declined to be named, told the Colonist in an interview.

The same official said the increase he felt most unhappy about was the frail grandmother-type on fixed income who stole some little toy or trinket because she just couldn't bear to see that little grandson go without a gift at Christmas.

One department store on the Victoria scene, Simpsons-Sears, is finding the greatest number of "boosters," as shoplifters are known to the police, comes from heroin users, many of whom have been chased from the downtown area due to too-frequent operations and the ability of the store protection officers to spot them.

Protection officer Blain Berg of Simpsons-Sears said the staff is given lectures and shown films on methods employed by shoplifters, especially the more sophisticated ones.

Among these devices are the booster purse, which has a trap door in the bottom; the carpenters' apron, worn under a loose coat to receive stolen articles; the dummy parcel, a suit or dress box with an opening to stuff with stolen goodies.

Among the less sophisticated methods are altering labels on items, by swapping from a less expensive item, a device which can be spotted by an experienced clerk due to merchandising coding on labels but is difficult for Christmas replacements.

Protection officers agreed Victoria Provincial Court is providing good backup for their operation, with a $250 fine being slapped on convicted shoplifters almost automatically and the prosecution department working in co-operation with the stores' officers and Victoria detectives, who assist in apprehension of suspects.

Forged or stolen credit cards do not present much of a problem locally, although a person thinking of using them might be tempted to use them around Christmas, when the clerks are busy and many are inexperienced, officials said.

"Fraud is a problem generally today," Archie Logan of Eaton's said, "because it is a more sophisticated way to obtain money than others."

There are, however, no new ways to combat the use of illegal credit cards at Christmas, he said, just the regular method of checking purchases over a fixed amount with the credit office, where the lists of stolen credit cards are surveyed.

In general, protection officers agreed, there are no specific types who can be designated as shoplifted types.

"They come from the very young to the very old," a police official said. "You just can't figure them out."

They range in reason from the youngster, trying it out for the first time, to the person who is in need but is tempted by the bright lights, tinsel, and dazzling displays. In between are the hard cases who do it for booze or narcotics, all year.

To the men and women of the stores' protective staffs, that is the way they play it, just like any other time of year, only with an increased staff to take care of the influx in business, just like storewide sales, spring sales, white good sales or any other events which last a few days and attract an extra number of customers.

Christmas — well it might not be exactly humbug to a store detective, but it certainly is humdrum.

Gift List Used By Woman For Shoplifting

By BRUCE LOWTHER
Colonist Reporter

Two reasons for shoplifting not heard in Victoria Provincial Court in at least the last two years were given Tuesday in separate cases — one woman was shoplifting her Christmas list and another said she "just wondered what it would be like" to steal.

The two women were among six who pleaded guilty before Judge William Ostler to separate shoplifting charges of theft involving less than $50.

Laurie Denis Dujardin, 20, of 1010 Linden, was remanded to Dec. 16 for a pre-sentence report and sentence after pleading guilty to a two-count charge that followed stops Monday at the T. Eaton store and The Bay.

A security officer from The Bay said Miss Dujardin was stopped at about 6 p.m. with a $7 pair of sunglasses, a $10 wallet, two $6.99 pairs of gloves, tweezers costing $1.75, a $15 man's turtleneck sweater, two 79-cent pairs of pantyhose, two $1.19 pairs of pantyhose and five belts, three worth $6 each and two worth $4 each.

He said she had no money but carried a shopping list which mentioned belts at Eaton's and "a sweater for Mike at The Bay."

Miss Dujardin said there had been no food in her house for three weeks, the same time she had been looking for work. She admitted the list was mainly Christmas gifts and she was shoplifting them.

Ostler, who said he had never heard of the practice before in court, told her: "You have the effrontery to make out a Christmas shopping list and steal it so that other honest people with families to support have to pay more for their articles."

Mrs. Patricia Forrestall, 20, of 877 Dunsmuir, admitted taking a $2.89 crib blanket Nov. 10 from Simpsons-Sears and was hesitant to tell Ostler why she had done it. Finally, she said:

"It's just that I see people going into stores and taking things and I just wondered what it would be like. How it would feel to do this. Well, now I know and, believe me, I never want to do it again."

The judge asked if the blanket was for a child Mrs. Forrestall is expecting, but she replied: "No, your honor, I didn't even have a crib that size."

Ostler said then he saw nothing to distinguish this case from most shopliftings and fined her the normal amount: $250.

Also fined $250 each were:

- Diane Emily Martin, 19, of Salt Spring Island, who took a $1.69 hair-care item Monday from The Bay.
- Mrs. Ann Sherman, 65, of 1813 Quadra, who took a $1.29 hair-care item Monday from the Little John Discount store, 1322 Government.
- Mrs. Muriel Mary Thorne, 50, of 4311 Tyndall, who took three items worth a total of $1.17 Nov. 29 from The Bay.
- Edith Salisbury, 72, of 6589 Sooke, who took a $25 bottle of French perfume Nov. 16 from W. and J. Wilson, 1221 Government.

'Road' Halted Ferry Subsidy

Wrong Word Cut Links

Ottawa acted on misinformation when it cut federal subsidies for private ferry service to ports on the west coast of Vancouver Island, B.C. Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said Tuesday night.

As a result, the subsidies should be restored immediately so that service can return to normal, Campbell said in an interview.

He said inquiries from the B.C. government showed federal transport department officials had reported the areas concerned were now connected by road — something that isn't correct.

It was because of the supposed road links that the subsidies were dropped, Campbell said.

He said the provincial highways department is asking Ottawa to make the necessary amends.

"Our point is that if that's the basis on which they made their decision, they should certainly re-examine it right away," Campbell said.

The subsidies concerned Northland Shipping, which services west coast ports on the Island. The move meant cutback in the service.

Films Added

More than 40 new 16mm films on everything from conservation to a traditional Christmas in Germany have been added to the audio-visual section of the Greater Victoria Public Library this year.

Advanced Poll Draws 25

A total of 25 votes have been cast in two days of advanced polling for five seats on the Capital Regional Board to be filled in the Dec. 11 civic elections.

A board official called the turnout "heavier than anticipated . . . as advanced polls go." He said most of the 25 ballots were cast in the Outer Gulf islands electoral area.

Today is the last day of advanced polling for election of directors to the Capital Regional Board.

Regular voting will take place Dec. 11, along with the civic elections in most B.C. municipalities.

Randy Pontious, 22, of 1316 Rudlin, and Judy Larkin, of 410 Kingston, enjoyed chore of cleaning windshield at Mayfair shopping plaza but weatherman warned snow would become rain by today.

Long Way To Go

'All Women Not Well Off'

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — You've come a long way, baby — or have you?

The answer is an emphatic "no." You're still a second-class citizen, although as women in the United States you've had suffrage since 1920, both equal pay and fair employment practices laws are on the books, women's lib is now a household term, there are more than 31.5 million of you in the U.S. labor force.

In fact, the great putdown of American womanhood ranges from women's failure to reach the tops in politics or the professions to the usual stereotypes that the poor driver is "just like a woman driver," a man refers to his secretary as "my girl," that if a meeting includes both sexes, a woman will undoubtedly take the minutes.

Eleanor Flexner minces no words about women's still underling role in society today in her Women's Rights — Unfinished Business, written for and distributed by the public affairs committee, a New York-based non-profit educational organization.

Miss Flexner has done much writing in the women's rights field and is the author of Century of Struggle: The Woman's Rights Movement in the United States.

In her writing for the public affairs committee, she notes that "overnight, it seems, there is a new term in the English language: women's lib," which she sees on the whole as a healthy development, long overdue.

But why should women make demands? Most American women are certainly better off than women in many countries (our standard of living is higher than in most other countries.)

But the fact is, she says, "All women are not equally well off or equally satisfied . . . the hard figures tell us that in key areas such as earnings and education, women are a good deal worse off than men."

Look at industry. "If we take more than the most cursory look, we find very few women in the top jobs," says Miss Flexner. Some women, of course, opt to leave the labor force to bring up a family, and if they go back to work, they have lost both seniority and experience.

"But women who have stayed at work, even if educated and unmarried and therefore 'available' for promotion," she continues, "are likely to find that equal opportunity still does not exist . . ."

Next, public service and politics. Today, more than 50 years after the women's suffrage amendment, there is only one woman in the U.S. Senate, Margaret Chase Smith of Maine. Still only a handful serve in the House — 12 in the 92nd Congress. No woman is now the elected governor of a state, Miss Flexner continues. A woman mayor with full responsibility in a large city is still a rarity. And only two women ever have sat in the U.S. cabinet.

(Miss Flexner did not mention that the recent clamor for appointment of a woman to the U.S. Supreme Court got no results).

In the field of higher education, women leaders "have almost vanished, even in the women's colleges where for three-quarters of a century women held positions of president and dean," she said. And "Look at the other professions. How many women's faces do we see on network TV . . . as anchor "men?" Commentaors? Reporters? Very few indeed."

Miss Flexner says that the movement for equal educational opportunities was the earliest of all feminist campaigns and had begun to bear fruit even before the Civil War. Even so, she says, black women benefitted almost not at all from any of the rights won until the "freedom movement" of the 1950s and 1960s.

A record 31.5 million women are in the working force (either actually working or looking for work), Miss Flexner says. But a look at the type of women who work (about 21 million are working because they and their families need the money to live on, for food, clothing and housing) should "demolish the myth . . . that a significant number of women in this country work only because they like to or want the extra money."

Lawyer's Fee May Be Free

LONDON (CP) — An end to legal worries is in sight for persons unable to afford lawyers' fees. Barristers and solicitors of the Law Society and the Bar Council have drawn up a pact to boost legal aid provided by the government. "We have altered the rules to allow lawyers to act without demanding a fee," a spokesman for the Law Society said. "It's also the answer to critics who claim that solicitors never represent ordinary people with small incomes."

Hexachlorophene Warnings Given

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) warned Monday against bathing with products containing 3 per cent or more of hexachlorophene on grounds the widely used soap ingredient may cause brain damage.

The warning — mailed to doctors and required on product labels — was based on new scientific data casting doubt on both the safety and effectiveness of a product used for years in homes and hospitals to bathe babies, cleanse wounds and burns, and treat various skin and scalp ailments.

A spokesman for Winthrop Laboratories, a division of Sterling Drug Inc., manufacturer of Phisophex, a leading hexachlorophene product, took issue with the FDA ruling.

"In more than 20 years of use and tens of millions of cases there has never been a single report of harm from Phisohex when used as directed," the spokesman said.

The FDA, however, said its decision in which newborn monkeys were bathed daily for 90 days with solutions containing 3 per cent hexachlorophene — the same percentage that is in Phisohex.

The monkeys showed measurable amounts of hexachlorophene in their blood and brain lesions, the FDA said.

The FDA also cited two other studies, including one in which 50 newborn babies were bathed with 3 per cent hexachlorophene solutions and showed measurable hexachlorophene blood levels but "no obvious toxic symptoms."

The warning label, to be published in the federal register today, would require this notice on products containing 3 per cent or more hexachlorophene: "Warning: Do not use for total body bathing. Rinse thoroughly after use."

Hexachlorophene is used in thousands of soaps, deodorants, vaginal douches, feminine deodorants and skin creams.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Your advice to Preston to "take the diamond ring back to the jeweller and get a refund or credit" was terrible. No jeweller of decent reputation would sell used merchandise. Do you know of ANY store that would accept an item purchased four years ago? A better answer would have been to take the diamond back to the jeweller and have it remounted for himself or his mother. Consider this letter—A Blast.

Dear Blast: Ouch! Here's another one:

Dear Ann: So the girl got a rash from the ring and decided she was allergic to Preston? Well, isn't that a shame? I'm sorry about the broken romance, but why did you tell him to return the ring to the jeweller? We are in the retail business, we aren't dermatologists. Today's short-term engagements (not to mention couples who just move in together) have made it tough on jewellers. You don't help with the kind of advice I read.—Ron Brodkey.

Dear Ron: You win. How about ten lashes with a double strand of cultured pearls?

Dear Ann Landers: I am about 10 pounds heavier than I ought to be and it's a battle to stay away from foods I like to eat. I'm beginning to think it's my father's fault. Is it possible? He comments on every forkful that goes into my mouth. If we are in a restaurant he calls my attention to the diet special. Once he slapped my hand (half jokingly) when I reached for a piece of cake. I didn't take it because I was embarrassed, but after dinner I sneaked into the kitchen and ate two huge pieces — to get even.

I realize this is childish and that I am only hurting myself, but what can I do about it? Should I tell him?—Big Bertha.

Dear Bert: No. I'LL tell him. All you need to do is hand him this column.

Dear Dad: In your effort to help your daughter lose weight you are driving her to eat more. I hope you and thousands of other parents who are concerned about overweight children will get it through your heads that nagging never took an ounce off anybody. Policing, warning, scolding, shaming, threatening and ridiculing are totally ineffective. The most helpful thing you can do is keep quiet — except to praise your daughter when signs of weight loss are evident.

Death of a Child Never 'Natural'

By MARLENE CIMONS
Colonist-Los Angeles Times Service

WASHINGTON — The date was Jan. 31, 1961, and it was Peggy Dalby's first night out since the birth of her third child a month earlier. "I went out to play cards, my husband was moonlighting in his second job, and my mother came over to baby sit," she said.

"My mother gave Theresa her 11 p.m. bottle and put her to bed," Mrs. Dalby said. "When I got home, I checked her and she was fine, sleeping peacefully on her stomach. Her crib was in my room at the foot of the bed. I went to sleep and heard her stirring at around 2 a.m. I got up, put the covers back on her, and went to sleep."

Feeding Missed

Mrs. Dalby's husband, John, who is employed by the telephone company, woke up at 6 a.m. and tiptoed out of the room to go to work. Mrs. Dalby got up an hour later.

"As soon as my feet hit the floor, I realized something was wrong. She was only a month old, and hadn't been sleeping through the night yet — but that night she hadn't cried for her usual 5 a.m. feeding. I looked at her, and she was grey. I touched her, and she was cold. I knew she was dead."

At that instant, as Mrs. Dalby stood in the centre of her bedroom screaming, she became one of approximately 10,000 mothers each year whose seemingly healthy babies die without warning or apparent causes. The U.S. National Institute of Child Health and Human Development calls it "sudden infant death syndrome" (SIDS). It is more commonly known as "crib death."

Exactly what happens is not known. It has puzzled the medical profession for years. Autopsies reveal no apparent cause of death, and in the pattern of past crib deaths — about three for every 1,000 live births — there are no clear answers for the heartbroken parents. Several factors have been described by National Institutes of Health spokesmen as being common to crib deaths, although doctors emphasize that some of these are often present in other infant mortality statistics:

More Male

- The highest number of deaths occur at the average age of 2½ months.
- More male babies are affected than female babies.
- Deaths usually take place during the winter months.
- The incidence seems to be higher among members of lower socio-economic groups.
- Many of those babies struck had suffered minor respiratory ailments earlier.

"My child didn't even have a runny nose at the time," Mrs. Dalby said. "It just wasn't natural. The death of a child never is. You expect to bury your parents, maybe even your spouse — but your child?"

Mrs. Dalby was more fortunate than some parents who suffer crib deaths. She had a sympathetic family and understanding friends. It isn't always that way. "My initial reaction was guilt. What did I miss? What did I do wrong? Was she sick?" Mrs. Dalby said. "In some situations neighbors think it's suspicious. I've heard cases where, after a crib death, neighbors would say, 'Well, I never really thought she was a good mother.'"

Volunteer

Mrs. Dalby's familiarity with other crib deaths comes from her volunteer work with the Northern Virginia Guild for Infant Survival, part of an international organization with 29 chapters. Mrs. Dalby is the founder and president of the Northern Virginia organization.

The guild's function is twofold. It raises money, through bazaars, dances and other activities, for research on the syndrome by the Health and Safety Research Institute in Springfield, Va., and members of the guild call, or visit, families who suffer a crib death.

They Start

"I hear about them through friends, or social workers, or pediatricians," Mrs. Dalby said. "I usually write them a letter, or phone. If I save them from guilt, and give them a little knowledge, that's what's important. It's very difficult for me each time I telephone. I sit for five minutes before I dial the number. I usually say something like, 'Mrs. Jones. I'm Peg Dalby with the Guild for Infant Survival — I want to know if there's anything I can do.' Then, right away, I tell her what happened to me.

"That's when they start going," she continued. "They ask, 'Did you feel guilty?' Or, did I feel this, or that? They want to know what to do with the clothes and toys. I tell them to get rid of them. The strollers and things like that, I say — 'Be practical. Go slow. Save them — there'll be other children.'"

There are many parents who lose their first child this way and are afraid to have any more, Mrs. Dalby said. "I was lucky that Therese was my third. My son, Jack, was 4 at the time, and my other daughter, Jeannie, was 19 months, when I had Theresa. It was ironic. When Theresa was born, I finally felt like a mother. With the first one, I was a mess. With the second, I gained some confidence. But with the third, I felt like a mother."

After Theresa died, the Dalbys had three more children. The first baby after a crib death is almost as difficult as the death itself," Mrs. Dalby said. "My nerves were shot. I was uncomfortable. I found myself checking the child ten times an hour.

I was worse than I was with my first baby. I was neurotic. If she hiccupped once, I panicked. It took me a long time, but I'm much better. I realized I was becoming overprotective, and that was just as dangerous."

Fast Action

That is why Peggy Dalby believes that the fastest action in crib death cases is the most beneficial. "You have to get to these mothers fast and snap them out of it," she said. "If you don't, only a psychiatrist will be able to do it."

Mrs. Dalby's five children — who range in age from 15 years to 18 months — are all aware of the circumstances surrounding their sister's death and the youngest, Mary Colleen, even participated in a research project on the subject when she was only a few months old. A tiny band, containing a transistor microphone, was placed around her body to monitor her heart rate.

It is one of several research projects being conducted around the U.S. This one — the Health and Safety Research Institute — is directly funded by the guild and the Northern Virginia Heart Institute and is being carried out through the work of three doctors: Dr. Michael Homa, a Springfield, Va., surgeon; Dr. William Inos, a pathologist; and Dr. Jack Spurlock, a biomedical engineer.

Nervous System

Their theory — and it is one of several in the United States being explored — is that crib deaths involve a breakdown in the nervous control system of the heart. "We feel that they are cardiac deaths because of their quiet nature," Spurlock said.

"There are usually no signs of a struggle at all, and the autopsy reveals no cause of death. When the nerve stops functioning, causing the heart to stop functioning, there is no way to identify it in an autopsy."

They are looking for some kind of identifiable "immaturity" or irregularity in the system. "We feel it's the one theory that offers any hope," Spurlock said. "If we could diagnose this immaturity early, soon after birth, a more thorough cardiac exam could take place and the baby could be watched very carefully. Perhaps we could then work with bio-chemists in developing regulatory drugs."

Nigeria Posting

Army Worker To Aid Lepers

Feeling more like a pincushion than a Salvation Army lieutenant, Angus Haggerty is waiting in Victoria for clearance to go to a leper colony in Nigeria to work.

A trained carpenter, Haggerty has been accepted for posting so that he can carve artificial limbs for lepers who have lost theirs.

His wife Sandra, also a Salvation Army officer, and their two daughters, Christina, who is nearly five and Fiona two, will accompany him.

The Haggertys came from Scotland to Victoria nearly eight years ago, joining the Salvation Army soon after their arrival. He worked for the provincial government as a carpenter until 1969 when they went to Hamilton for two years training as Army officers.

At the end of his training he was given the appointment to Nigeria.

"We've been getting all these innoculations — typhoid, smallpox, yellow fever and all," he said. "We're feeling more like pin cushions than anything else."

When Haggerty leaves Victoria he will go first to Uganda for training in carving the artificial limbs before he and his family to to Nigeria to work.

Wife-Beating Not a Right

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — The Rhode Island supreme court ruled recently men do not have the right to beat their wives.

On a written decision the court denied the claim of Aram Berberian, 48, a Cranston lawyer, who said the state and federal constitutions guaranteed his right to assault his wife "in accord with his fundamental right to chastize her."

Chief Justice Thomas Roberts dismissed the case as "utterly without merit."

Commenting later on the case, Roberts said, "I could never agree that one of the great natural rights was the right to beat your wife."

Berberian, who is being sued by his wife for separation, said in his presentation before the court, "Marriage is not a partnership . . . two persons are married into one and the husband is the one. To protect the wife from molestation is to suborn her disobedience. When wives are permitted to disobey their husbands with impunity, the stability of marriage is threatened."

Berberian claimed his wife, Barbara, 50, had slugged him three times, and claimed the court should direct her to cease "initiating any aggressive tactics" against him.

Trio Shares 'Hero' Tag

A taxi driver, a policeman and a drive-in manager might not be expected to have much in common — but in Greater Victoria Tuesday, three men with those occupations shared the title of hero.

In Oak Bay, Island Taxi driver Alan Kelly was driving off-duty Oak Bay policeman Len Reid to Reid's home when the two noticed smoke coming from a home at 1569 Foul Bay. They helped residents William MacFarlane and his wife get the nine children in the home to safety.

In Victoria, manager Thomas Waters of the Oak Bay A and W Drive-In at 1921 Oak Bay found a wallet on one of his counters and phoned Victoria police, who got the wallet and its contents of $510 back to their owners.

Oak Bay Fire Chief Bill Pearson said damage was estimated unofficially at $8,000 in the blaze at 1569 Foul Bay. He said the fire may have started from overheating around a small, older-type fireplace in the dining room.

No one was hurt among the MacFarlanes and their nine children, some of whom are foster children. Chief Pearson indicated steps might be taken to send a letter of commendation to Kelly and Reid for their prompt action.

Drive-in manager Waters said he "phone police right away" after finding "about the thickest wallet I've ever seen." A Victoria police report traced ownership to David Fotheringham, 1692 Earle, and Susan Fitch, 1153 Rockland, through papers in the wallet.

Balcony Study In Oak Bay

Oak Bay council Monday night referred a memo from municipal engineer Geoffrey White on the much-debated issue of balcony projections and size of setbacks in apartments to Committee A for further study.

The memo outlined recommendations for zoning restrictions on balconies and setbacks, limiting projections for balconies in three-storey buildings to six feet and in two-storey buildings to five feet.

It also recommended that setbacks for three-storey buildings be increased to 25 feet with a minimum of 20 feet, and that setbacks for two-storey buildings be increased to 20 feet with a minimum of 15 feet.

The lands and building committee had requested changes in the bylaw governing apartments because members of council felt that some apartment balconies extend too far out from the main walls of their buildings.

Building inspector Bill Skead had said that the present setback regulations, which stated that setbacks were to begin from a building's foundation, would reduce landscaping if a building's wall extended out from the foundations.

Mars Probe Lands

MOSCOW (AP) — An unmanned Soviet space capsule parachuted onto Mars sent television and radio signals to earth, the news agency Tass reported Tuesday. It is the first time a functioning man-made object has soft-landed on the planet's dusty surface.

The capsule was dispatched to Mars last Thursday from the Soviet probe Mars 3, which continued to circle the planet in an orbit more than 930 miles high, Tass announced.

The agency gave no details on the shape or weight of the capsule which landed or the next step in its mission.

Tass did say, however, that the craft sent radio signals to the Mars 3 mothership, which in turn relayed them to earth Thursday through Sunday. The agency added that the vehicle also sent some "video signals" but they "were brief and suddenly discontinued."

Mars 3 was launched May 28 and took 188 days to reach the red planet, 76 million miles from earth. It followed closely behind Mars 2, launched May 19. Mars 2 dipped into a wide eliptical orbit of Mars on Nov. 27.

Hospital Transfer Blocked

GATINEAU, Que. (CP) — Hospital employees blocked the entrance to the Pavilion Claude children's hospital here Tuesday to prevent evacuation of 93 children to another hospital about 25 miles away.

The children were to be moved to Pavilion du Parc, operated by Redemptorist Fathers at Alymer, Que., but when ambulances arrivd some of the hospital's 85 employees blocked the entrance with their cars.

Police were called by the hospital administration, but left a few minutes later. The children remained in the Pavilion Claude.

"At the moment we have no mandate to take any action," said Capt. Rene Simard of the provincial police.

Employees are protesting the move, saying they would have no union at the Alymer hospital and that it would mean a lengthy drive to work each day.

Diver Entered 'Treasure Pit'

BROOKLYN N.S. (CP) — A diver was lowered three times last summer through a shaft into a cavern 235 feet below the surface of Oak Island, the famous "treasure island" in Mahone Bay, about 60 miles southwest of Halifax.

Phil Irwin, a diver with Atlantic Divers Ltd., said that once inside the chamber he could not see its walls and only a ghostly reflection of his diving light outlined portions of the ceiling. He could not see the bottom of the cavern but stood on it and felt around for any objects that might be near.

Irwin and six other divers were involved in the descent to the chamber. For the first 180 feet, Irwin said, he was protected by being lowered through a steel pipe, 26 inches in diameter. The remainder of the dive was through the shaft carved from bedrock.

The first dive was made Aug. 7 with other dives following on Aug. 14 and Aug. 26. The men were sworn to secrecy until last month when Dan Blankenship, project manager for Triton Alliance Ltd., disclosed that a television camera lowered into the shaft showed three chests, a pick axe and a human hand.

Triton Alliance is the latest in a series of firms and individuals who have sought to unravel the mystery of what, if anything, lies buried in the "money pit." The search has been carried on since the late 1700s when a ship's block was discovered hanging from the limb of a tree over a depression in the ground.

Irwin said on his first dive, water rushed into the shaft so forcefully it was sweeping his face mask off. The diver said Blankenship solved the problem by bulldozing soil into the ocean over the suspected entrance of the flood channel. The move worked, he said.

Irwin said he found no sign of marine life in the cavern and discovered nothing that would dispute Blanship's discoveries by television camera.

Postal Services To Be Increased

Post offices in the Victoria area and all other parts of B.C. will provide both house-to-house deliveries and full wicket service on Saturday, Dec. 18, to help clear the Christmas mail rush, a Victoria post office spokesman said Monday.

But information officer Ken Stofer said he hasn't received confirmation on other dates for additional postal service during the Christmas season.

Vancouver's post office announced that full wicket service — but no carrier service — will be available at post offices in the province next Saturday — Dec. 11. Full wicket service, but no house deliveries, will apply on Tuesday, Dec. 28, Jan. 3 will be a full holiday for all postal employees.

Stofer said the announcements by Vancouver's post office will "more than likely" apply in the Victoria area.

Closing date for Christmas cards to distant points in Canada and the United States, Stofer said, is Wednesday. He said closing date for points outside the Victoria area — from Vancouver Island to the prairie provinces — is next Monday and Dec. 17 is the closing date for cards mailed within the Victoria area.

Cards mailed after the closing dates, Stofer said, run the risk of arriving at their destinations late.

Exhibit Honors Painter

An exhibition commemorating the 100th anniversary of the birth of Victoria artist Emily Carr will open Sunday at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria.

Work by Miss Carr will be hung in the founders' room of the new wing and will remain on view until mid-February.

An added feature will be presentation at 8:30 p.m. Dec. 14 of Bill Thomas' Emily Carr: A Centennial Portrait.

The play deals with the painter's relationship with the coastal Indians and her attitudes toward life, art and society in early Victoria. Miss Carr's part is played by Sheila Litt.

Couple Trapped in Hotel

Winnipeg Fire '...So Horrible'

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Fort Garry Hotel, damaged extensively by an early-morning fire Tuesday that sent guests fleeing in night attire, is continuing to operate, but with reduced bedroom capacity.

All the 90-odd guests registered in the 210-room Canadian National hotel just south of the city's main downtown area were safely evacuated. They included three people who were trapped for an hour in their rooms above the flames.

"I thought it was the end," said Jack Brooks, 68, a retired CNR supervisor living in Swan River, Man. He and his wife Olive watched the blaze from their ninth-floor room, licking up from the fire a floor below.

"We shouted and waved a blanket and we threw down pillows and lamps to draw attention. It seemed so horrible, watching the men working down in the street but not seeing us. Finally they shone a light on us and we knew we'd been spotted."

Robert Dodds, a Toronto management consultant, had been forced out on the eighth-floor ledge by the dense smoke in his room.

The three were beyond the reach of fire department ladders and had to wait while oxygen-equipped firemen fought through burning hallways to rescue them.

Shopping Centre Bomb-Shattered

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — A 10-pound bomb exploded in a crowded shopping centre in downtown Belfast Tuesday, injuring 18 persons, the army said.

The blast shattered a record shop in the Queen's Arcade only moment after its employees and customers spotted the bomb and fled.

They said two young men and a girl planted the bomb at gunpoint shortly before closing time and gave them 30 seconds to get out.

"I looked around the counter and by my feet was a brown bag smoking heavily," one customer said. "I dashed out and told people outside to run."

Any army spokesman said most of the injured were hit by flying gloss and other debris and that all but one man were released from the hospital after emergency hospital briefly for shock treatment.

Five other persons went to hospital briefly for shock after a bomb planted by three armed men blew up in a co-operative store on West Circular Road, the spokesman said.

A third bomb damaged a gasoline station on Kennedy Way but caused no casualties, the spokesman said.

The blasts coincided with the funeral of 13-year-old Jimmy Cromie and five other victims from the bombing of McGurk's Bar Saturday night. They were among 15 killed in the blast.

GENERAL MOTORS PRESENTS THE LATEST WORD IN SMALL CARS... FIRENZA SL SPORT COUPE

THE 1972 FIRENZAS ARE HERE WITH FIVE WAYS TO GO SMALL!

With the addition of the exciting SL Sport Coupe, Firenza has the perfect small car for every economy buyer. Whether you're doing the daily supermarket run, commuting to the office or just looking for a way to economize without compromising your driving pleasure, Firenza has it!

Small car. Big choice. Firenza offers two 2-door sedans and a 4-door family sedan, all with styling you can be really proud of. Prefer a wagon? Firenza's swing-up tailgate is fully counterbalanced; cargo area has protective vinyl-covered matting; cargo capacity is 62.3 cubic feet with the rear seat down. Roof rack is standard.

Then there's the new SL Sport Coupe! It looks like what it is—the latest word in small cars. Very sleek.

3-Speed Automatic. That's the way a lot of people like it—and especially the ladies—so Firenza has a 3-speed automatic extra-cost option available and it's a real smooth operator. If you'd rather take command of the action, you'll stay with Firenza's standard 4-on-the-floor manual shift.

1975 c.c. Engine. To start the action, a big 1975 c.c. power plant is standard on every Firenza. More than enough power to help move you easily into fast-moving freeway traffic.

To stop the action, all Firenza models come with power front disc brakes. Standard, at no extra cost.

HERE'S WHAT YOU GET!

Firenza 2-door Sedan—standard features

Value for your money. Firenza is powerful, reliable and strong. You get room that doesn't keep reminding you you're in a little car. Luxuries you thought you might have to give up to go small. It even has a trunk that's a real trunk ... 12.2 cu. ft. in Firenza sedans.

General Motors value. Firenza is built and backed by General Motors and has GM-designed safety equipment and an exhaust and evaporative emission control system.

$48,000 Ransom Paid In Quebec Kidnap Hoax

MONTREAL (CP) — The manager of a downtown bank paid out $48,000 in ransom Tuesday when he was told his wife had been kidnapped.

But all the time she was at a beauty parlor having her hair done, police said.

F. J. Guy, manager of a branch of the Bank of Montreal, received a telephone call about 11:15 a.m. Tuesday.

"We are holding your wife captive," he was told. "Do as you're told or we'll kill her."

The anonymous caller demanded $50,000 for the safe return of Mrs. Guy and gave instructions for the transfer of the money.

The bank manager was told to place the money in a briefcase and board a subway train at a downtown station.

He was instructed to leave the briefcase on the floor of the train and get off.

Guy did as he was instructed within the 15-minute deadline given by the anonymous caller and got off the subway at the terminus.

He returned to his bank and called the police and attempted to reach his wife at home.

After several calls he discovered his wife had been safe in the beauty parlor the whole time.

Not only had she not been kidnapped but the man claiming to be the kidnapper may not have got the money left on the subway.

About 10 or 15 minutes after he returned to his office Guy received another phone call from the anonymous kidnapper.

"You didn't follow our instructions," the man said, repeating the instructions given during the first telephone conversation.

By this time the bank manager knew that his wife was safe and he hung up.

Police said all trains on the subway line involved were checked but the briefcase containing the money was not found.

Probe Sought On Car Deals

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford was asked Tuesday to investigate charges that imported-car dealers "steal thousands of dollars" from customers by misrepresenting the date of a vehicle's manufacture.

Barry Mather (NDP — White Rock) sent Basford a letter he had received from the Automobile Protection Association alleging dealers update the advertised model year of cars left in stock each September.

The association, a three-year-old group affiliated with consumer advocate Ralph Nader, says "last-year" models are legally represented as current model-year cars and sold at the usually-higher price of new models.

The customers, says the association, "only discover they have been tricked when they return to their dealer the next year and discover that their car has been depreciated by two years — almost 50 per cent — rather than the expected one year — 30 per cent."

The letter quotes a recent Nissan Company Ltd. statement that purchasers of its Datsun automobiles know of the redating practice.

"When we followed the ... practice, we have always expected our dealers to explain to their customers about this practice in import sales to avoid any possible misunderstanding."

The consumer group rejected the company statement.

"Obviously by the number of people complaining to the Automobile Protection Association the customers are not being told the truth."

St. Joseph's Shelves Expansion—'No Funds'

Lack of funds has caused St. Joseph's Hospital officials to shelve a plan to create an expanded intensive care unit on the hospital's sixth floor, executive director Dr. Embert Van Tilburg said Tuesday.

"We are still looking at areas in the hospital where we might create such a facility, although all funds from the latest referendum have been used up," Van Tilburg said, in a telephone interview with the Colonist.

"We would like to provide 20th Century in a 20th Century building," he said.

The hospital has been working with a four-bed intensive care unit for a number of years now, he said, and the sixth floor proposal was considered after the vacation of the area which formerly housed 28 sisters from the Sisters of St. Ann.

Van Tilburg said the shortage of intensive care facilities was a major problem of the hospital at the moment; feasibility studies which showed a cost estimate of $650,000 for a 10 bed unit ruled out use of the abandoned sixth floor.

Instead, the space will be used to provide lockers and change rooms for employees, Van Tilburg said, to fill a need that has been expressed by the Hospital Employees Union in past years for improvement of facilities for employees.

Winning Contract

By HOWARD and BEE SCHENKEN

"Dash it, Holmes, my luck at the club shows no sign of improvement.

"Yesterday I arrived at six spades with this hand. West led a heart and I decided that by far the best method of play would be to establish dummy's club suit.

"Accordingly, I led a club, to the ace and ruffed a club. When both opponents followed suit, it remained only to draw trumps, ending on the table.

"I proceeded to lay down the A-Q of trumps but East, confound him, showed out on the second round. It was not quite impossible to bring in the clubs and I could not avoid going down several tricks. Rotten luck, what?"

"My dear Watson, it certainly seems that you do not enjoy the best of fortune, but on this occasion there was a simple play which would have ensured the contract.

"After having established the clubs, you should have taken only one round of trumps, with the ace. Then you should have led a low trump and finessed the ten.

"If the ten loses to the jack, you can win any return in your own hand and cross to dummy's king of trumps, thus drawing the last outstanding trump.

"In the actual case, when East shows out on the second round of trumps, you simply play out clubs until West ruffs. Then West's last trump will fall under dummy's king and the remaining clubs can be cashed. Purely elementary, my dear Watson."

Stewardesses Grounded

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Stewardesses, a movie about the off-duty sexual activities of flight attendants, had another forced landing today as city police morality officers seized the film from the downtown Metropolitan Theatre.

Attorney-General A. H. Mackling in an interview said he ordered seizure of the film.

He said the theatre company, Metropolitan Theatre Ltd., and the theatre manager will be charged under obscenity sections of the Criminal Code of Canada.

They are to appear in city magistrate's court Friday morning to face two charges — "exposing to public view obscene matter" and "having in possession for purpose of exposing to public view obscene matter."

The movie, showing for its fourth week here, has done a land-office business at the theatre.

Mackling said the film was seized when the theatre opened its doors at 12 noon to avoid the necessity of making refunds to patrons.

Last week, morality officers took possession of the film in Saskatoon and charges are to be laid.

Snakes Safe

MOSCOW (AP) — Laws passed in 1971 to preserve nature's balance in the Soviet Republic af Kazakhstan prohibit the killing of all the desert area's snakes and lizards.

Talks Resume In Dock Issue

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Peace talks resumed Monday in an effort to avert a resumption of the West Coast dock strike.

President Nixon's special board of inquiry called negotiators for the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union and the Pacific Maritime Association together to re-examine the key issues. Both sides held a bargaining session Saturday.

Hughes Not Hiding

NEW YORK — Now it can be told — Howard Hughes is not only alive but has spent the last year touring the Western Hemisphere and transcribing his autobiography on tapes for publication next March.

McGraw-Hill book company has announced it has acquired the world publishing rights to Hughes' 230,000-word manuscript and will bring it out in book form March 27. Prior to hardcover publication, Life Magazine will publish three 10,000-word installments from the work.

Hughes worked in a face-to-face relationship with author Clifford Irving on the project which included 100 taping sessions "in various motel rooms and parked cars throughout the Western Hemisphere," McGraw-Hill spokesman said. He added that this definitely meant Hughes has not been spending all his time in seclusion in a hotel in the Bahamas, as was generally believed.

Benson Confident

Progress Made On Auto Pact

OTTAWA (UPI) — U.S. officials are eager to reach agreement on the international monetary crisis and there is a "very real possibility" of a settlement before the end of the year, Finance Minister Edgar Benson said Tuesday.

Benson made the comment here on his return from a Washington meeting with U.S. Treasury Secretary John Connally Monday. "The Americans are very anxious to settle the international monetary situation," he said.

"There is a very real possibility that a settlement can be reached in the next month or two — if not at the group of 10 meeting in Washington Dec. 17 and 18, then very soon thereafter."

Benson was asked if Connally and other U.S. officials seemed "more conciliatory" during the talks. "If they are, they can afford to be," he said, following increases in the exchange value of the Japanese yen, the German mark and other currencies.

He indicated progress was made towards changes in the 1965 U.S.-Canadian auto trade agreement. He gave no details however, and said officials would still have to work out many aspects.

He was asked if changes in the pact would be part of a "package" of trade concessions in return for settlement of the monetary crisis and lifting of the U.S. 10 per cent surcharge on imports.

"It will not be part of the packaged but it will be settled," Benson said. "We have been talking about this for a long time and now we've discussed it at the ministerial level and it can go back to the officials."

Benson said he had discussed "certain problems" with Connally which previously had not been discussed by officials in the negotiations on the auto pact.

The Canadian delegation also repeated objections to the so-called DISC (Domestic International Sales Corporations) proposal in the tax bill now before the U.S. Congress, Benson said.

The proposal would give sizeable tax benefits to U.S. export industries and would encourage U.S. subsidiaries to close their Canadian plants and move them to the United States.

Public Apathy Main Concern of Candidates

By BARBARA McLINTOCK
Colonist Reporter

One of the main concerns of many of candidates running for the position of school trustee on Capital Region school boards is the lack of interest by the public in the school board elections.

The fact that school trustee elections are overshadowed by mayoralty and aldermanic contests was highlighted last week when fewer than 50 people turned up for the only all-candidates meeting for the Greater Victoria school board elections.

But in two of the three school districts in the Victoria area there is no lack of candidates.

A total of seven are running for four seats for the Greater Victoria board, which is electing its trustees on an at-large system for the second year.

In Saanich school district, nine persons are contesting four vacant seats on the board, five of them running for two seats in Central Saanich.

Candidates divide themselves broadly into two main groups: those interested primarily in school financing and administration, and those interested in the methods of education within the schools, — how the children are taught.

The seven candidates contesting the Greater Victoria seats this year, (x indicates incumbents):

Bunn

De Roo

Graham

Knight

x Peter Bunn, 888 Linkleas, Oak Bay, a self-employed contractor, Bunn is completing his first decade on the board, during which time he served as chairman for two years.

One of his main present interests is to abolish lifetime tenure for teachers, requiring their performance to be reviewed every five years, perhaps. He would also like to see more teachers' aides take the administrative load off highly qualified teachers; a system of taxes for schools which would lift the burden off the homeowner, and a concerted community effort to get one good elementary school for the James Bay area.

Karel de Roo, 475 Quebec, a 66-year-old clothing manufacturer, de Roo is making his first bid for public office. As chairman of the Damien Society, one of his particular concerns is to establish a sound system of drug education in the schools beginning when the children are quite young.

He also wants ta see teachers keep their political and religious beliefs out of the schools and improve educational opportunities for Indian children.

Harry Graham, 633 Radcliffe Lane, Oak Bay, another candidate making his first try for public office, Graham is a retired professional engineer. He hopes the school curriculum will be kept "flexible" to meet the needs of today's students and will allow them to study new subjects, such as ecology.

He is also concerned about easing the educational tax burden on the homeowner, and suggests this might be done by a higher tax on the natural resource industries, especially logging and mining.

x Dr. H. A. Knight, 4190 Glendenning, Saanich; Knight is completing his first term on the board and this year has served as vice-chairman and chairman of finance, legal, and negotiating committees. A resource management consultant, he is interested in trying to reduce costs while maintaining high quality education.

He is a strong supporter of community participation in education, broader availability of education for adults, and a more integrated curriculum, including outdoor education.

Frank Preston, 766 Monterey, Oak Bay; a technician with the Victoria engineer's department, Preston is making his second try for a board seat after being defeated last year.

Preston says he is "prepared to apply all my energy examining the priorities, the planning and the programs of the board to insure that the students in the classroom benefit fully from your tax dollars."

Ted Robbins, 4482 Tyndall, Saanich, another candidate making his second bid to become a trustee, Robbins, a property manager, is mainly interested in keeping school costs down.

He suggests the board might impose a temporary freeze on operating expenditures, or might stop hiring new personnel for a while.

Preston

Robbins

Temple

Armstrong

x Mrs. Daphne Temple, 1243 Richardson; the only woman trustee on the Greater Victoria board, Mrs. Temple is completing her second year in office. A homemaker, she is concerned that there should be greater freedom in schools for children to develop according to their natural abilities, but emphasizes she does not mean by this that the children should be able to do whatever they like.

Her other concerns, she says, include more and better counselling in schools, more and better vocational programs, and giving the best teachers to the youngest children.

SCHOOL DISTRICT 63

In the Saanich school district, two candidates are contesting the seat for the northern part of Saanich municipality:

x Jack Armstrong, Mark Lane; Armstrong is completing his fourth year on the Saanich board and is its current chairman. An investment salesman, Armstrong would like to see all teachers banned from serving on school boards and greater co-operation between boards and the provincial government.

Mrs. Patricia Peach, 4320 Glanford; a medical bookkeeper, Mrs. Peach is making her second bid to join the Saanich board. She supports greater individualization of instruction, more co-operation between teachers, trustees and parents, and more help for children with learning disabilities.

In North Saanich, a former board chairman is challenging the current incumbent:

x Charles MacNeill, 1492 Land's End Road; MacNeill, chairman of the Red Cross's blood donor panel, is completing his fourth year on the board. He says his main reason for running again is the need for experienced trustees on the board when it puts a building referendum, which will include funds for a new high school, to the voters in February.

Rubymay Parrott, 9620 Ardmore, Mrs. Parrott was chairman of the board in 1970, but in last year's elections she was defeated by Trevor Davis. Attempting to regain her seat, she says her two greatest concerns are easing the tax burden on the homeowner and improving the school bus service throughout the district.

Two seats are open in Central Saanich because of resignations during the year, one for a two-year term and one for a one-year term. Two candidates are contesting the two-year seat, and three the one-year seat.

Running for the two-year seat are:

Mrs. Emily Foerster, 1459 Mount Newton Cross Road, a homemaker and former home economist and teacher, Mrs. Foerster is making her first try for public office. She says she is concerned about education from the point of view of a mother, citizen and taxpayer, and believes the district must begin to plan now for school needs of the future.

Harry Johnson, 8074 McPhail; another newcomer to the political scene, Johnson, a lawyer, believes that many schools, especially large composite high schools have "lost track of what it is we're aiming for." It should be remembered that schools are preparing students for life, not just for a job, he says, and to this end, there should be efforts to decrease anonymity in schools.

Running for the one-year term on the board are:

Kenneth Adams, 7930 West Saanich Road; a retired navy admiral, Adams is making his first attempt to gain a political office. He says he is running because he wants to be of service to the cammunity, and does not want to see any minority group gain control of the board.

Gordon Ewan, 8143 Patricia Bay Highway, Ewan is seeking to regain the board seat he resigned earlier this fall in protest against board policies. He says he is looking for a mandate from the voters to continue to press for basic changes in the policy-making and management of the board — changes which, he says, would solve many of the district's problems.

Claudia Whipple, 8898 Marshall; running for a board seat for the first time, Mrs. Whipple's special interest is children with learning disabilities. She feels her long residence in the district and community experience could make her a valuable trustee once she learns the ropes.

In Sooke school district 62, which includes Colwood, Langford, and Metchosin as well as Sooke, Port Renfrew and Jordan River, four incumbent trustees were elected by acclamation.

The four are: board chairman Fred Willway, Howard Drummond, Ronald Fitton and William Stephenson.

Vote Scott | X | Dec. 11

YES —There ARE Great Issues for Victorians— FOR YOU To Decide When You Vote.

SCOTT CLAIMS and CAN PROVE

- Homeowners Taxes CAN be held down — and even cut.
- Waterfront Land, including the "REID PROPERTY," should be purchased—not for "High-Rises"—but for public use, e.g. convention-cultural centre—parks, etc., and paid for with the "Scott" Tax Plan.
- $5,000,000 annually should be collected into City Revenue from those businesses benefitting most from the Victoria Consumer.
- The Homeowner Taxpayer Pays too much tax and must be relieved.
- The smaller business man pays too much for tax licence fee.
- This tax license fee must be in direct proportion to the amount of Business Done and Benefits Derived.
- An Oil Company or/and Finance Company—Each grossing millions of dollars must pay more than at present—i.e. $1,300.00 and $400.00, respectively.
- A strong Mayor's Appeal to Equity from the Provincial Government will cause enactment of FAIR Business Tax—License Fees.
- We can have a more beautiful and still progressive Victoria, with these untapped $5,000,000.
- We can have prosecution of present air, watersight pollutors—and with no more Shilly Shally.
- We can have a clean and wholesome Inner Harbour and Waterfront.
- We can have clean and proper Downtown comfort facilities.
- We MUST have Victoria's "Old Town" preserved and bettered.
- We can collect a Fair $5,000,000 Business Tax to ease the home owner taxpayers burden—But only with strong dedicated leadership.

Family and Children's Service

Takeover Fear Union Key

Possibility of a regional takeover of social services in Greater Victoria was reported Monday to be the main reason for formation of a new union covering employees of the Family and Children's Service.

"The employees realize that without a collective voice they have no say in the takeover of their positions," said John Shields, president of the union, which has been named the Social Service Employees Union.

He was referring to the Capital Regional Board in connection with possible takeover.

The union has been certified as bargaining agent for about 150 non-management personnel in the Family and Children's Service. Negotiations aimed at bringing about a first contract have already started.

Shields said a collective voice for employees is not only important to usual contract matters, but to clients who use social service agencies.

A handy example, he said, was one social worker having to deal with 300 welfare cases. He said it was impossible to handle such a caseload with any efficiency.

The new union intends to reach beyond the boundaries of the family service, he said. Plans at the moment call for contacts with more than 2,000 people in the social services field.

PROVINCIAL COURT

A 67-year-old Victoria man stopped by police Nov. 11 as he was going through unlocked cars at Blanshard and Yates told the officer who arrested him he often did so and, if he saw something he liked, he took it.

That was the reason, the constable said Tuesday in Victoria Provincial Court to Judge Willian Ostler, the elderly man had three empty beer bottles, three empty pop bottles, three packages of cigarettes (the man doesn't smoke), an RCMP insignia and a dead bird on which he was "going to do an autopsy."

The man, George Max Chemnitz of 1010 Queens, also had a sheet with him and pleaded guilty Tuesday to theft involving less than $50 — taking the soiled sheet from the glove compartment of a parked truck. The constable said the truck driver had just taken soiled items in the sheet to a laundry from a motel.

As a topper to the story, the constable said Chemnitz was carrying $1,303 of his own money — he didn't trust banks.

The constable urged mental treatment for Chemnitz and the judge agreed. Chemnitz was sent to Riverview Hospital on the Lower Mainland and the case was marked to be called again Jan. 4.

David William Dunstan, 18, of 635 Langford, was remanded to Dec. 17 for a pre-sentence report and sentence after pleading guilty to a charge of theft of more than $50.

A Victoria detective said a 62-year-old Saanich man befriended Dunstan and a juvenile around midnight Nov. 18, buying them drinks at a beer parlor and then taking them home. Once there, Dunstan took between $60 and $70 and left.

The plea was entered after Ostler withdrew an earlier charge of robbery on application of prosecutor John MacIntyre.

A suspended sentence and three-year probationary term were ordered for Jerome Maurice Olaizola, 30, of 2821 Fifth, who plealed guilty Nov. 26 to a charge of breaking and entering and theft. The charge followed theft of TV sets and other items worth a total of $2,800 early Nov. 18 from Quadra Appliance service Centre, 3514 Quadra, and Ostler said a jail term would have been imposed if Olaizola had not been a first offender.

Michael James O'Hanlon, 19, of 1639 Hampshire, was sentenced to 21 days in jail following his plea of guilty to a charge of impaired driving early Tuesday in Victoria. O'Hanlon admitted it was his second conviction for such an offence.

In traffic court, two persons were fined $350 each and given partial three-month driving bans after pleading guilty before Judge E. F. N. Robinson to separate charges of impaired driving in Victoria. They were Lindsay Edwards, 20, of 318 Irving, stopped Nov. 11, and Ernest Byrne Smith, 65, of 40 Boyd, stopped Nov. 15.

Acropol Serves Delightful Fare

By BILL THOMAS
Colonist Reporter

Old Virgil may be a great guy when it comes to telling it like it was with the wooden horse and all outside Troy but he is right off his form when he says "fear the Greeks when they come bearing gifts."

The Spartans could have been lured outside the walls simply by having the Greeks prepare dinner. The smell of the food would have had them outside in a flash, especially if it had been anything like they still serve at the Acropol in Vancouver.

This is probably one of the most self-effacing establishments in that city but it should be on every diners list if he happens to be forced to visit Tom Campbell's fief.

Here's what happens when the diner disembarks at 2946 West Broadway in search of gourmet delights.

The dining room is small and the tables are clean and set out with red check tablecloths. There is no need to be dismayed at the lack of a menu. There is no menu because it's unnecessary.

Chef Demosthenes Kourkaris doesn't have enough English to compose a menu but his son Themys presides behind a counter fitted with hotplates and is ready to explain what is on for the day.

He is an expert pastry chef and is responsible for the desserts but they come later.

Themys delights in explainin what he has, and he went the rounds for us on a recent trip.

There was a massive hunk of meat roasting on a vertical spit. This he explained is called donnerkebab and it consists of slices of beef, pork and lamb seasoned and spiced. It is served when it's crisp on the outside and juicy inside.

The restaurant likes to give first timers a run for their money and the daring diner can try everything.

The rich purple aubergine or eggplant is a staple in the Greek kitchen and the Athenians of the Acropol serve it filled with garlic, onions and tomato. The eggplant is baked and served hot.

The same vegetable also comes prepared with meat and a cheese topping under the name moussaka.

Themys suggested some mixed vegetables also with plenty of garlic. His version of zuccini, carrots, celery and potato is well worth a try.

Go to the Acropol any time between 10 a.m. or 1 a.m. but go hungry and enjoy it.

The food is surprising and the bill is amazingly small.

Go Exotic!

In my last column we were discussing the growing of houseplants from seed. This is doing things the hard way, I'll grant you, for it is much easier to buy your plants all nicely grown to maturity by professional greenhouse experts, but there is a very special satisfaction in attending at the birth of a plant destined to become your living room companion.

In studying the seed catalogues, you can find all kinds of seeds for the production of exotic houseplants — seeds selling for only 25 to 50 cents per packet — but this isn't the only source. Chances are there are seeds in your kitchen cupboard right now which are capable of being grown into unique and attractive plants. I have in mind, for example, such things as date stones, grape seeds, seeds from dried chili peppers, the big egg-shaped seed from an avocado, and seeds from oranges, grapefruit and lemons.

Every year, once we get into December, I start getting letters asking whether baby palm trees can be grown from date stones. Why these enquiries should all come in at this tinfe of the year, I haven't the foggiest idea. Could be more dates are being used in Christmas baking, or perhaps the weather has started folks thinking about tropical islands and palm trees.

I wouldn't call the date palm a beautiful plant by any stretch of the imagination, but it makes a good conversation piece and is certainly easy to grow. Simply plant your date stones half an inch deep in a pot of purchased potting soil and keep moist but not wet and in a warm place.

You'll find date stones quite unpredictable. If no baby palm tree appears after a wait of two weeks, better dig up the stone and have a look. If there are no signs of sprouting, chuck it out and try again with another. I don't know why some date stones sprout so readily while others from the same package seem quite lifeless, but I suspect it has something to do with pollination.

Once the stones germinate and the seedlings appear, transplant into individual pots and grow on in a sunny window. Keep the soil just a little on the dry side in winter, but during the summer months you'll find your little trees take almost twice as much water as any other houseplant of comparable size. A lot of folks go wrong on this point — they figure that as dwellers of the desert sands, date palms don't need much water, forgetting that in nature they are found only in an oasis or close to a water hole.

Of the citrus fruits, I find the easiest seeds are those from the pink grapefruit of Texas, and the trick here is to buy the ripest fruits you can find on the fruit stands, avoiding any with a trace of green on the skin. Quite often, while eating a thoroughly ripe grapefruit, you will run across a fat seed which has already sprouted, showing a tiny green shoot emerging. One of these, when potted up half an inch deep, should be up and growing inside of a week.

Next time you treat yourself to an avocado salad, why not have a go at growing an avocado tree from the stone? These, like date stones, are somewhat unpredictable, but a fair proportion of the seeds should sprout. A good way to start one is to suspend the seed in the mouth of a jar with the big end in water, using toothpicks pushed into the sides of the seed to hold it in position. After sprouting and making some roots in the water, the seed is planted in potting soil.

One word of warning: Don't expect to pick avocados, grapefruit or succulent dates from your pantry-shelf houseplants. These plants do NOT bear fruit under houseplant conditions and are grown purely for their novelty and ornamental value.

Summits Explained

WASHINGTON, D.C. — I rushed back to Washington to have a summit conference with President Nixon. I feel he should have at least one with an American, if only for practice.

We can spend an hour or so discussing the financial difficulties his new economic policies have caused me. Then he can devote 15 minutes to telling me how he isn't going to sell me out when he goes to Peking and Moscow next year.

After that, we'll pose, smiling and shaking hands, and issue a joint announcement saying we had "Very frank and friendly discussions which we hope will further cement the bonds between us."

This will get Nixon all tuned up for the remaining summit conferences he's got scheduled with Chancellor Brandt in Key Biscayne, Premier Sato in San Clemente, Prime Minister Heath in Bermuda and President Pompidou all the way over in the Azores (which just shows how far you have to go to meet a Frenchman half way these days).

He should sail through undefeated, untied and unscored-upon.

There's no question Nixon will be delighted to confer at the summit with me. After all, I invited him. It's the first invitation to a summit he's had. In all other cases, he had to issue or wangle the invitations himself.

In fact, many experts believe this is the reason for this sudden spate of sumit conferences. You know how it is. There's Mrs. Nixon sitting tatting a sampler and there's Nixon slouched in his chair watching pro football.

"How come we never get invited anywhere, dear?" says Mrs. Nixon.

"Go for the screen," says Nixon preoccupied.

"Jackie and Lady Bird got to go all around the world with their husbands," says Mrs. Nixon. "But nobody ever asks us out — out of the country, that is."

"Are you implying that my breath . . ." says Nixon frowning. "Or is it unwanted dandruff?"

"Oh, I'm sure it's neither, dear," says Mrs. Nixon hurriedly. "I've been thinking about it. Now when was the last time we had the Satos to dinner?"

"Sato who?"

"Premier Sato of Japan. Or Chancellor Brandt for that matter? You see, dear, the reason nobody invites us out is that nobody owes us. We simply have to break the ice, that's all."

"By , golly, Pat, you're absolutely right! Get the invitations in the mail today!"

Of course, other experts may reject this theory of why Nixon suddenly scheduled half a dozen summit conferences as absolutely ridiculous. And, fair is fair, they are perfectly welcome to come up with their own absolutely ridiculous theories.

But meanwhile, you can see how pleased Nixon will be to receive my genuinely unsolicited invitation to a summit conference. Even if its from a fellow American.

After all, with whom has he got the most troubles to discuss, them or us?

Julie Plays Santa

Julie Andrews must have one of the most formidable Christmas gift lists in Hollywood. In addition to her presents for family and friends, there are those youngsters at Hathaway Home who can count on their good friend Julie playing Santa each December. Hathaway Home is a San Fernando Valley foundation for emotionally disturbed boys that has been the recipient of great amounts of Julie's time and energy these past several years.

Julie has proved how very much she cares. Her donation of salaries from two TV specials gave a big enough boost to the Hathaway Home building fund that, with the aid of a government grant, the enlargement of the campus is nearly completed, including new living quarters, a gymnasium and a hospital. But, more important, she hasn't been content to settle for a mere financial involvement in the project. She pays visits to the home, has organized trips to movie studios, and has arranged for film prints to be sent to the Valley institution for special screenings. And, of course, there are those Christmas gifts for the youngsters, whom, as Julie put it, "I've grown very attached to."

Rich Little has already been invited to pay a return Here's Lucy visit next season, as a result of his Nov. 15 guesting on that CBS show. During that recent appearance, impersonator Rich limited his on-camera impressions to Jack Benny, but couldn't resist doing some set-side takeoffs on Lucy. She thought he caught her well enough that she's told him next time around he can do his Lucille Ball bit on camera.

Mitzi Gaynor, who guest-stars on Perry Como's Winter Show on NBC Thursday, told me her real name is Mitzi Gerber. She changed it, "because it sounded too much like baby food."

Why the Poor Fail

It's easier to make the transition from your own nation to a foreign nation than from a rural area to an industrial area in your own nation. This seems to be one of the hard lessons modern sociology is learning today. Take the United States for example.

The immigrants who came to the U.S. in the 19th and early 20th centuries spoke another language, but they had skills that were in demand at the time, and were rapidly absorbed into the economy — if not the social system — of that era.

But the three main disadvantaged groups of our day — the blacks, the Puerto Ricans and the migrant white southern mountaineers — are all American citizens, in the main speak English, and yet cannot obtain the economic leverage to hoist them into the mainstream of society.

This is why comparisons are so ignorantly unfair between the ethnic groups of the past, who "made it," and the poor in the cities today. If we blame it on language — as with the Puerto Ricans — or on color — as with the blacks — what about the white southern mountaineers, who ethnically represent the "purest" Angle-Saxon strain still alive in the United Sates?

The plain fact of the matter is — all passion and prejudice aside — that we have moved twice in this century, not once. First, from an agrarian society to an industrial society, and second from an industrial society to an "information" society. This is what the new "immigrants" cannot cope with.

When America needed skilled craftsmen, it got them from the slums of Europe; when it needed heavy labor, it recruited them from the farms and fields, enticed them to the big cities and left them stranded.

Nowadays — and increasingly since the end of the Second World War — the base of the U.S. economy is information more than manufacturing (see any of Peter Drucker's books for confirmation of this fact), and information is precisely the skill lacking among these three groups.

Poverty could lift itself up by its own bootstraps in the past, because we provided at least the laces. The immigrants needed us, and we needed them. We no longer need the same kinds of people; how long do you suppose a Central European fruit peddler would last in the alleys with his horse and wagon today? Or an "iceman"?

Everything has changed, except our attitudes. The new wave of immigration has little to offer us, so our response is rejection when it should be education. And don't bring up the "race" thing, either — those mountaineers in their urban hovels are dying of laughter.

Torre Performance Best in 23 Seasons

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Joe Torre of St. Louis Cardinals turned in the best one-man batting show in the National League in 23 years.

Torre, named the league's Most Valuable Player for 1971, batted .363 and had 230 hits, 137 runs batted in and 352 total bases to finish on top in four categories of the official batting statistics released.

IN THE FAMILY

The last National Leaguer to lead in as many departments was the Cardinals' Stan Musial, who won eight individual titles in 1948. Musial now is a vice-president of the Cards.

The 31-year-old Torre saw his batting average balloon 38 points over his best previous mark, .325 in 1970.

While Torre was winning his first league title, St. Louis team-mate Lou Brock raced to his fifth stolen-base title with 64 thefts during 1971.

Brock also scored the most runs, 126, and had the longest hitting streak of the year, 26 games.

Willie Stargell of the world champion Pittsburgh Pirates won his first league home-run championship with 48.

Other individual leaders included Cesar Cedeno of Houston Astros with 40 doubles; Joe Morgan and Roger Metzger of Houston with 11 triples each; Willie Montanez of Philadelphia, who had 13 sacrifice flies; and Ralph Garr of Atlanta, with 18 sacrifice bunts.

Logger at Loggerheads

When all else fails you arm yourself with all kinds of signs and picket Victoria office of Workmen's Compensation Board, as Raymond Windecker did Tuesday to press fight for compensation he says is being denied him. UVic student Windecker, 23, was injured in logging mishap last June. Payments were cut off Nov. 7. WCB in Vancouver expects review board to make decision on his appeal within week or so.

Church Unions 'Can Work'

Unions between churches of separate denominations can work if efforts begin at the grass roots level, a Victoria clergyman said Monday.

Rev. R. A. Faris, in an interview, said, however, that such a movement would need guidance from church hierarchies.

Faris, of First United Church, was commenting on a statement by a member of the the 10-member committee that drew up the Principles of Union for the Anglican and United Churches in 1965 who said that church union should be abandoned.

Rev. D. R. G. Owen, of Toronto, told a meeting of the general commission on church union in Windsor recently that the problems of the church cannot be solved "by the invention of new structures or by ecclesiastical mergers."

"There is no longer anything that would justify the continuation of the long, expensive and time-consuming efforts to achieve a bilateral organizational union," he told the meeting.

Instead of continuing to work toward union, Owen said, the Anglican and United Churches should "announce that there is no mutual recognition and intercommunion on the basis of the principles of union."

"Let them state that they are ready to reach a similar concordat with any church that accepts the Principles of Union.

"Having done this, let us devote our time, energies and money to the real problem, which is the renewal of the Church of Christ in thought, in worship, in life and in action," he said.

Faris said he feels that some "good things have happened (since the Anglican-United church alliance) that wouldn't have happened unless this was in progress."

All churches, Faris said, should work toward union and a start must be made somewhere. He said people in Gold River of United Church, Anglican and Catholic faiths share the same building, worship separately each week but worship together once a month.

"When it happens that way, it's a beautiful thing," Faris said. He described Gold River residents as "people with love in their hearts and meaning to their lives."

Ferries, Telephones Brace for Christmas

Ferry crews, airline personnel and telephone operators will be working this Christmas to serve the public.

B.C. Tel is already preparing for the usual Christmas onslaught of calls. More than 165 telephone operators in Greater Victoria will be on duty Christmas Day, and "we'll be staffing our traffic operating room to full capacity," Glyn Jones of B.C. Tel told the Colonist Tuesday.

The operators will be working five to six-hour shifts to handle the holiday calls.

"Calls usually build on Christmas Eve and continue through Christmas Day," said Jones. "There's a slight drop from about 4 to 6 p.m. — people are getting ready for dinner or visiting — then builds up again," he said.

Jones also urged people to fill out the special emergency cards sent with telephone bills this month, so that callers will have the numbers of fire and police departments, doctors and ambulance services on hand for emergencies and will not have to depend on operator assistance.

"When traffic is so busy it's difficult to reach an operator," he said. "If you call the number you'll get through directly instead of having to wait for the operator."

Air Canada is also revving up for the holiday season.

There will be extra flights between Victoria and Vancouver and across Canada from east to west and west to east so that thousands of Canadians can visit with friends and families for the holiday.

The B.C. Ferries will step up its schedule of sailings as well, to accommodate all those travelling between the mainland and Vancouver Island for Christmas.

Christmas Day sailings will be restricted to a two-ship operation, however, so that crews can spend time at home with their families.

Dec. 18 to 24 and Dec. 26 and 28 there will be hourly sailings from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. from the Tsawwassen and Swartz Bay terminals, and the same sailings will run Dec. 31 to Jan. 4.

Sailing times from Tsawwassen Dec. 29 and 30 will be 7, 8, 9 and 11 a.m., non, 1, 3, 5, 6, 7, 9 and 10 p.m.

From Swartz Bay the times will be 7, 9, 10 and 11 a.m., 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 7, 8 and 9 p.m.

CRASH VICTIM'S FUNERAL HELD

Funeral service for Judith Mary Worth, 24, of Port Renfrew, killed Sunday in a traffic mishap, was held Tuesday afternoon at Sands Mortuary with Rev. Henry Silvester officiating.

Mrs. Worth, Sooke RCMP said, was alone in her car when it left Beach Drive in Port Renfrew and rolled over, ending up in a ditch. She died enroute to hospital in Duncan.

Born in Victoria and married for about six months, Mrs. Worth is survived by her husband, Tom, at home.

She is also survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Elliott; sisters, Mrs. D. (Coleen) Green and Kathy, and her brother Dave, of Port Renfrew; her brother and sister-in-law, Jim and Star Elliott, of Lake Cowichan; aunts and uncles; and her father-in-law and mother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Worth, of Oliver, B.C.

Candidate Pleads Not Guilty to Assault

Scott Trial After Election

Victoria mayoralty candidate William Scott lost out Tuesday in Victoria Provincial Court to have a charge of assault by trespass against him decided one way or the other before Saturday's election.

Scott pleaded not guilty to a charge of assault by trespass in resisting attempts by Royal Theatre manager Martin Cave to have Scott leave the theatre Monday night.

Scott's lawyer, Rodney Taylor, asked if the matter could be concluded this week. But Judge William Ostler said the only open period in court during the week was Tuesday morning and prosecutor John Macintyre said he could not get the crown witnesses together in time.

The trial was set for Jan. 3 and Scott was released on his own recognizance in the meantime.

He said Monday night he had handed out cultural literature outside the theatre, during a Victoria Symphony Orchestra concert, because rival candidate Foster Isherwood was giving out election pamphlets and he (Scott) wanted to prove he was more of a cultural man than Isherwood.

Tuesday, Scott charged police were unnecessarily harsh to him after his arrest. He said his shoes were taken away and he was forced to stand for two hours in police cells before Taylor arrived.

Deputy Police Chief Ray Maitland said shoes, tie and belt are taken from apprehended persons for their own safety and added he was sure Scott was "treated with every courtesy befitting the situation."

Scott said he would ask for a hearing by the Victoria police commission of the matter.

Also in Provincial Court, Chuck Williams, 27, of 11 Eaton, was fined $50 by Ostler after pleading guilty to a charge of assault by trespass Monday evening in the Kings Hotel beer parlor, 568 Yates.

Macintyre said Williams was intoxicated and refused requests by both a waiter and the police to leave the beer parlor. Ostler told Williams it wasn't a question of a whim of the bartender — "it's his duty under the law" to remove troublesome people.

Solo Dancer Foils Inept Troupe

By BILL THOMAS
Colonist Staff

The Contemporary Dancers of Winnipeg offer a pointless performance in both senses of the word.

The company danced two recitals Tuesday at the McPherson Playhouse. The afternoon show was in bare feet and it was with one exception dull.

Easily the best thing of the afternoon was a solo performance by Rachel Browne to the sound of Odetta singing All My Trials.

She has all the poise and disciplined elegance anyone could ask of a dancer. Above all her hand movements are perfect.

This was all well and good but the quality of Miss Browne only serves to frame the inept performance of her company.

Alongside Miss Browne the rest seemed like oafs. It may not be their fault but the comparison is there to be made right on stage.

There is the possibility that the problem is twofold. The dancers may lack technique and on the other hand it could be that they are working with poor material.

Any movement that doesn't advance the mood or the story is redundant and the show is full of redundancies.

At the same time True Believer, choreographed by Robert Moulton, is really a good piece of work. The story of fanaticism is well told.

Moulton's work Rondo ad Absurdum was funny and the audience, mostly of little girls, loved it.

It is difficult to understand why the Victoria Centennial 71 Committee opted for the Contemporary Dancers when they were looking for a show to sponsor. There must be some cultural attraction in B.C. that is the artistic equal of this company.

There is also the matter of the ushers at the McPherson Playhouse. Do they really have to mutter continually and show latecomers to their seats in the middle of item four on the program?

Possibly the company has been the victim of its own publicity and we were expecting something really quite special. We didn't get anything really special.

Long-Lost Art Discovered

LONDON (AP) — A long-lost masterpiece by the 16th century artist Titian has turned up, in an English country house, an authoritative art magazine reported Monday. The Burlington magazine said the painting, a portrait of two young princes, probably was completed about 1544. The owner's identity was being kept secret.

UN Demands Truce, Troop Pullback

From CP, AP

By an overwhelming vote of 104 to 11, the United Nations General Assembly called Tuesday night for a ceasefire on the Indian sub-continent and for withdrawal of Indian and Pakistan troops back to their borders.

Only most of the Soviet bloc, India and a couple of other countries opposed the 31-country resolution.

Other countries, including Britain and France, abstained.

Even the Soviet bloc was not unanimous in its opposition, with Romania voting with the majority.

The resolution is not binding and India is not expected to pay any attention to it.

United States and China, who have sided with Pakistan in the war, voted for the resolution, as did Canada.

Joining the Soviet Union and India in opposition was tiny new state Bhutan on the Indian border, and Cuba. Five other countries stayed away and one country declined to participate in the vote.

The vote was a reflection of the feeling of a majority of the countries that the sovereignty and territorial integrity of countries are inviolate and must not be interfered with.

In speeches before the vote, Canada and Pakistan called for UN supervision of any ceasefire. But there was no resolution on this matter.

A Soviet resolution calling for a ceasefire linked with political settlement in East Pakistan was not put to a vote.

In the war, India suffered a severe blow on its western front Tuesday but claimed it had crushed the "hard outer crust" of East Pakistan defences. It urged the Pakistani army in the east to surrender.

The Indians, under heavy attack in the west, admitted they had lost the town of Chhamb in the northern state of Kashmir. If the Pakistani drive there is unchecked, it will cut a vital road to the northern part of that disputed state. Chhamb is 30 miles northwest of the major Indian town of Jammu.

But on the Eastern front, All-India Radio reported Indian troops were "tightening the ring" around the East Pakistani capital of Dacca after capturing a series of important towns in the province.

In other developments:

● An official Pakistani spokesman in Rawalpindi said 305 civilians had been killed and 500 injured since Monday by Indian air force bombing and strafing in both parts of Pakistan.

● In Calcutta, officials of India's West Bengal border state said preparations were being made for the return of nearly 10 million refugees driven into India this year by internal strife in East Pakistan.

● In Moscow, informed non-Soviet diplomatic sources said the Chinese government will not intervene militarily in the war as long as Pakistan forces continue fighting.

However, should Pakistan show it is unable to hold out against the Soviet-backed Indian war machine, one said: "We will have a tailor-made situation for a people's war.

"China is not going to give it up."

Civilian Rule Ahead for Pakistan

Pakistan Radio announced Tuesday that President Gen. Agha Momammad Yahya Khan has asked two political strongmen in his regime to form a central coalition government — a move that would end his one-man military rule.

The government-run radio said Yahya requested leftist leader and former foreign minister Zulkfikar Ali Bhutto and rightist leader urual Amin to set up the coalition government after Dec. 27.

Amin, who heads the minority Pakistan Democratic Party, is an East Pakistani and would assume the role of prime minister, while Bhutto would be his deputy.

Yahya, in an announcement from his home in nearby Rawalpindi, said he had made the decision to end his one-man rule in light of the civil war with East Pakistan and war with India, which have resulted in the disruption of communications between the two wings of the country, Radio Pakistan said.

January End Seen For U.S. Surtax

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau and senior ministers say they are confident after meetings in Washington that the international trade and money crisis will be settled in a matter of weeks and United States surtax on imports withdrawn.

Bilateral trade disputes between the U.S. and Canada are expected to be resolved simultaneously, although differences apparently remain on the future exchange rate of the Canadian dollar.

While expressing confidence on immediate trade and money problems following Monday's meetings with President Nixon, the prime minister attached the greatest significance to what he said was Nixon's reassurance that the U.S. has no wish to dominate Canada economically or politically.

That "fantastically new statement from the mouth of a president of the United States" means that Canadians will be able to consider imminent policy on controlling foreign investment "with greater freedom, less apprehension and less inferiority complex."

The prime minister's assessment of his Washington trip, reinforced by ministers and officials who accompanied him, emerged from a series of briefings, a press conference before he left Washington Tuesday morning and in a report to the Commons on his return.

His report back in Canada provoked mixed reaction that ranged from reserved approval by the Progressive Conservatives to harsh criticism by New Democrats.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said he was pleased about the Washington trip, but suggested that Nixon's general assurances about respect for Canadian autonomy should be backed up by more precise "guidelines" governing U.S.-Canada relations.

Linda's Wish May Yet Be Realized

By KATHRYN HAZEL
Colonist Reporter

Seven-year-old Linda wishes Christmas could be the way it used to be when Mommy was alive.

The "500" Fund

That was two years ago, before Linda's mother died and her father lost his job.

Tommie, three, and Joannie, five, were too young to remember much, but Linda does. There'd be a Christmas tree, which she would help decorate.

The boxes under the tree would be wrapped with red and green paper and inside would be wonderful things, like a doll, or a picture book, or a cuddly stuffed toy.

It isn't like that any more. Even when Daddy was still working, Christmas wasn't as much fun. Meg, the housekeeper, tried to cheer the place up, and she made a turkey dinner, but it just wasn't the same.

Since last February, when Daddy was laid off, life's been even gloomier. Daddy seems tired all the time, he never seems to smile or want to play games.

When Linda showed him the list she'd made for the three of them to give to Santa, he just put it in his pocket and turned away. He didn't even read it.

Linda's beginning to wonder if Santa's going to come at all this year. It doesn't look like they're going to have a tree, and Linda knows that even if they did, there wouldn't be any presents.

A contribution to the Colonist 500 Fund can bring happiness to Linda's family and others this Christmas. Money from the fund goes to Victoria's neediest families so they too can enjoy the season.

Donations may be sent to or left at the Colonist, 2631 Douglas, or dropped off at Avis Rent-a-Car, 800 Douglas.

President Matthews, leader Stanfield after election — CP

Tories Unite To Support New President, Stanfield

OTTAWA (CP) — Don Matthews, of London, Ont., was chosen Tuesday president of the national Progressive Conservative party amid cheers from a thousand delegates who were told repeatedly the Conservatives will form the next federal government.

During the presidential campaign at the annual convention candidates called for party unity and hard work to prepare for the federal election expected in 1972.

Matthews said in his victory speech Conservatives must form "a united party behind our leader, Robert Stanfield, who is going to be our next prime minister."

Matthews, 45-year-old president of Matthews Group Ltd., a land development and housing company, drew support from all across the country, his campaign organizers said.

The factionalism and dissension which have plagued the Conservative party since the fall of the Diefenbaker government were almost buried under the atmosphere of confident unity.

But a few manifestations of discontent appeared in the presidential campaign.

James Baskin of Renfrew, Ont., said the party has not made good use of its human resources, particularly women and youth.

A faction composed partly of maverick Westerners and Diefenbaker loyalists provided much of the support for candidate John Pallett, former MP for the Ontario riding of Peel and once parliamentary secretary to John Diefenbaker during Diefenbaker's period as prime minister.

Island Blanketed

It Will All Melt Today

Tow truck operators in many regions of Vancouver Island were doing a booming business Tuesday night as a result of snow which blanketed the Island during the day and evening. From one to four inches piled up in the season's first major fall.

RCMP detachments in communities throughout the Island said snow began to fall Tuesday afternoon.

Most of the detachments reported treacherous road conditions and said snow tires were mandatory.

RCMP reported a rash of minor traffic mishaps but no injuries and said tow trucks were kept busy pulling cars from ditches.

Weather officials at Victoria International Airport however, had a hopeful report for today. They said most of the snow will melt away today except at higher levels.

Campbell River RCMP said road conditions were treacherous throughout their area. They said the road to Gold River had not been cleared by snow removal equipment and patches of ice existed under the snow.

Very few vehicles, RCMP said, were able to move around in their area without chains. They said snow tires were mandatory and chains were recommended.

Port Alberni RCMP reported a flurry of minor traffic mishaps and said about three inches of fresh snow had blanketed their area. Road conditions were poor, snow tires were mandatory and chains were recommended, they said.

Courtenay RCMP said tow trucks were busy as a result of four inches of snow. They said snow tires were mandatory and chains were recommended.

Nanaimo RCMP said about an inch of snow had made roads slippery. They said roads were passable but reported a rash of traffic mishaps. Snow tires were recommended.

Duncan RCMP said snow fall in the area was slight but was getting heavier during the night. They said snow tires were mandatory on the Malahat, which had received a heavy snowfall, but persons could drive without such tires in the community at their own risk.

Tofino and Ucluelet RCMP both said their communities were blanketed with about two inches of snow. They reported no traffic mishaps and said business was dull for tow trucks. Snow tires, they said, were mandatory.

Gold River RCMP said a fresh snowfall of seven inches was added to about a foot of existing snow in the area. They said motorists heading for Port Hardy were stranded in Gold River by the snow. Snow removal equipment, they said, will clear the road today.

Bombs Kayo Atom Smasher

STANDFORD, Calif. (UPI) — Two bombs exploded early Tuesday at the Stanford linear accelerator, tearing to shreds the electronic heat of the two-mile long atom smasher.

The FBI began an immediate investigation of the sabotage, which may keep the research facility shut down for weeks.

No one was in the area where the blasts occurred and they were not discovered until workers entered the building at the remote "trigger" end of the facility about 8:30 a.m. and found it "in a shambles." An official said the blasts could have gone off anytime between 11 p.m. and 8 a.m.

Several hours later, about 400 employees of the linear accelerator were evacuated after a bomb threat, but firemen found no more bombs.

Two major components of the accelerator control center were knocked out by the blasts. Damage was estimated at $100,000.

Missed

Shop at Sly Corner 'Good Family Fun'

DUNCAN — The Cowichan Valley Theatre Association will present The Shop at Sly Corners 8:15 today, Thursday, Friday and Saturday at Cowichan senior high school auditorium.

The play, written by Edward Percy, will be performed by a cast of local actors and actresses including Digby Smith, Robert McLean, Jean Davis, Alison Evans, Norma Mole, Peggy Smith, David Proctor, Norman Flower, Allan Mole and William Abram.

Proceeds from the three-act play will go to aid the Cowichan Valley Regional Arts Council with its objectives.

Director of the play, John Getgood said public support for the theatre venture would not only demonstrate the great need for a theatre auditorium in the Duncan area, but in the long run, would be of some benefit to all other arts groups within the region.

Getgood described the play as "top flight family entertainment."

Courtenay Airpark President:

Poor Approach to Landing Contributed to Fatal Crash

COURTENAY — A poor landing approach by the pilot has been linked as a contributing factor in the Nov. 25 light plane crash which killed a Victoria RCMP officer.

President of the Courtenay Airpark Association, Eric Franklin, made this charge in a letter to Courtenay city council Tuesday.

"We believe that the high load factor on a low performance aircraft . . . under marginal weather conditions for the type of operation, were imminent factors contributing to the crash," Franklin said.

Franklin told Courtenay council in his letter that several witnesses had told the airpark association that the approach configuration of the aircraft was bad — "that is airspeed low, glide path too low, too much flap extended, power was not applied until the approach was badly undershot."

He also charged in the letter that the pilot had been "very inexperienced" but did not say on what information the association based the claim.

RCMP Constable Michael Robert Mason, 29, of 1245 Lyall, Esquimalt, was killed in the afternoon crash in which a Cessna 172 plunged upside down into the Courtenay River.

The plane's pilot, Victoria police Detective-Constable James Macdonald, 27, of 10221 Almond, Sidney, was seriously hurt in the crash and two other Victoria area policemen were injured.

Early reports said that the plane had struck a tree before crashing into the river but Franklin said investigations led the association to believe that this was not so.

All that could be found, he said, was one tree, a "spindly cedar" which was apparently struck by the plane's undercarriage, probably not impairing the aircraft's flight.

In defence of the Courtenay airpark, Franklin said that a fly-in earlier this year by more than 30 aircraft "in weather almost as deteriorated as on the day of the accident" was accomplished without incident. He added that comments from transport department, RCMP, and Canadian Forces about the airpark had always been favorable.

Franklin said he believed criticism of the airpark was made in order to publicly criticize the Canadian Forces Base at Comox for refusing to give landing clearance for the Cessna shortly before it crashed.

"This is normal procedure for aircraft without prior permission and not reporting an emergecy," he said.

Franklin claimed that the Victoria chapter of the Canadian Aircraft Owners and Pilots' Association "have been conducting a vendetta with the Canadian Armed Forces for several years."

Victoria police said at the time of the crash, that pilot Macdonald was an experienced flyer . . , "an excellent pilot who won high praise for a recent job of shadowing-by-air above Victoria."

Courtenay council received and filed Franklin's letter without comment.

MacMillan Bloedel Reinstates Crew

PORT ALBERNI — Five dismissed workers at MacMillan Bloedel Ltd.'s Franklin River division have been reinstated.

The move followed a meeting Monday night of the Franklin River sub-local of Local 1-85 of the International Woodworkers of America at which members agreed to a proposal drawn up by the union and the company.

Under the proposal, the men, involved in the dispute over a new tension skidder, and a scaler, who had also been dismissed, were reinstated. The union will take up the matter of lost time through arbitration.

Fallers Still Locked In Dispute

The company has agreed that workers on the tension skidder will not have their rates cut. When new rates for the equipment are negotiated the men may, if not satisfied with the rate, return to their previous jobs.

Monday's proposal was similar to one turned down by the men Sunday night, with the exception of the move to arbitrate for time lost by the dismissed men.

Work returned to normal Tuesday at Franklin River and the tension skidder was used for the first time in two weeks.

Meanwhile, there appeared to be no respite in the dispute involving MacMillan Bloedel and fallers at its Kelsey Bay and Eve River divisions.

The 47 fallers involved rejected a new pricing agreement Sunday and company officials warned Monday that 500 employees will soon be out of work due to log shortages if the fallers stay off work.

Six Programs on Island

Unskilled Projects Backed by Ottawa

Federally-sponsored work programs for inexperienced workers totalling $808,554 in 33 projects in B.C. were announced by the federal manpower department Tuesday.

Two Victoria programs — James Bay United Church Action Committee outreach program ($14,976) and Victoria West Community Development Association renovation program ($16,380) were announced Monday by Victoria MP David Groos.

Four other Island programs in the Cowichan Valley, Port Alberni, Denman Island and Campbell River were among those announced Tuesday by the federal department.

John Atchison, project officer for the federal government's special programs, confirmed about 100 applications have come into the regional office for the training on-the-job program.

Atchison told the Colonist the program is more or less designed to assist young persons, graduate students or married women seeking to enter the work force, all of whom would lack practical work experience to attract an employer.

Under the program, the federal government pays 75 per cent of wages to an employer, who will train a person from three to 12 months for a newly-created job.

The Cowichan Valley Forest Museum will get $20,569 to construct a building; Alberni Low Income group $25,938 for cleaning and repairing senior citizen homes; Denman Island Community Club $16,400 to clear a park and construct a boat ramp, and Campbell River Family Services Society $10,200 to set up a crisis centre.

George Bevis, who formerly was manager of Victoria Manpower Centre office, has been handling the special programs directorship for the federal department, throughout Vancouver Island.

Subsidy 'Absolutely Essential'

IWA Backs Up Protest Of Skeena Prince Loss

VANCOUVER (CP) — The International Woodworkers of America has added its protest to those of Vancouver Island residents against a federal government move to drop a shipping subsidy to remote west coast ports.

Jack Moore, regional IWA president, said Tuesday the union sent a telegram to Transport Minister Dan Jamieson urging him to take whatever action is necessary to continue the shipping service.

The department announced Dec. 2 that the government would no longer subsidize sailings of the Northland Navigation Co.'s Skeena Prince to 12 isolated ports on the rugged west coast of the Island.

The ship's last sailing is scheduled for Dec. 22.

"As representatives of most of the working people along the west coast of Vancouver Island, we must express to you our shock at hearing of federal plans to discontinue subsidies of shipping services in that area," the IWA telegram said.

"The vessels concerned provide an absolutely essential service to the residents by moving people and personal property at costs which wage earners can afford.

"We are dismayed at the reported remarks of an unnamed official of the Canadian Transport Commission to the effect that the B.C. provincial government must carry the subsidy."

The IWA protest backed up the protests of provincial municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell, who complained that the federal government is discontinuing subsidies to coastal shipping in B.C., while continuing them in eastern Canada.

Northland and a smaller shipping company have been sharing in about $400,000 in subsidies annually to continue sea transport to the west coast communities.

Whittaker Handbill 'Amazes' Smith

NORTH COWICHAN — Mayor Gerry Smith said Tuesday he is "amazed" that his opponent, Ald. George Whittaker, "does not know what is going on after he has been sitting on the council for the past year."

The remark, in reference to a handbill sent by Whittaker campaigners to municipal ratepayers, was made at an all-candidates' meeting sponsored by the Southern Ratepayers and Citizens Association.

Whittaker's election pamphlet had asked: "What progress has been made in those two years? What progress toward efficient operation?"

Smith said considerable progress had been made and added that Whittaker will "never do as good a job as has been done in the last two years."

Whittaker said it was his "insistence" that kept the mill rate from going up this year.

"It is my honest opinion that with careful operation we can decrease the mill rate and improve services.

Other candidates who appeared at the meeting were Ald. Margaret Robertson, Ald. Tom Burgé, Ron McKinnon, Peter Idema, David Haywood, Henry Bepple, Archie Stevenson, Perry Ross and Bob Evans.

SPEC Eyes Noise Probe Cash Grant

NORTH COWICHAN — North Cowichan Mayor Gerry Smith, who is the new vice-chairman of the Cowichan - Malahat branch of the anti-pollution group SPEC, has made application to the federal government for a $32,000 grant for a community noise survey.

Smith said the local SPEC branch has a good chance of getting the grant.

He added the survey would be conducted in the greater Cowichan Valley area which comprises 150 square miles with a population of about 25,000 people.

Smith said, "If we get the grant we would hire 15 people to do the survey which would take about four months."

War Curb Sought In Senate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Senate foreign relations committee unanimously approved legislation Tuesday that it intended to restrict presidents from committing troops to overseas wars without the direct consent of congress.

The Bill, spawned by the Vietnam war, is the result of years of debate over the erosion of congressional warmaking powers. It probably will be brought to the floor next spring during the presidential campaign. The administration strongly opposes it, although it has bipartisan support from both hawks and doves.

The bill would prohibit a president from committing U.S. troops to battle without congressional authority. But in the event of an attack on the United States or its troops overseas — or the "direct and imminent threat" of such an attack — the president could commit troops to hostilities for up to 30 days.

Sen. Jacob Javits, (R-N.Y.) who originated the measure offered examples of its application.

● If Soviet troops invaded Western Europe, where the United States has 310,000 troops, the president could act immediately to repel the attack and continue fighting for up to 30 days without congressional authority.

● If the bill had been in effect at the time of the 1965 U.S. intervention in Cambodia, the president would have been barred from conducting that operation without advance congressional authority. In Javits' opinion, the attacks by North Vietnamese forces did not represent "direct and imminent" threats to American troops.

The measure specifically exempts hostilities in which the armed forces are engaged on the effective date of this act, thus exempting the Indochina war.

Sen. J. William Fulbright (D—Ark.), the committee chairman, said he was concerned that the provision authorizing the president to act on his own would give the executive branch authority it does not have under the constitution.

He said he would offer a floor amendment authorizing 30-day presidential action "only in conditions constituting an emergency not permitting advance congressional authority."

Nanaimo Regional District Board

Communication Gap Bugs Some Voters

NANAIMO — Zoning and a lack of communication between the Nanaimo and Regional District board and the people it serves appear to be the main issues in the election campaigns of 13 people running for regional district office.

In the Cedar area, Mrs. Thelma Griffith, who is completing her second term, said planning and zoning are issues that are of concern along with the regional difficulties of what to do with garbage and planning for recreation.

"If we don't get busy having park areas set aside we won't have any land left at all."

Mrs. Doris Menard, formerly a school trustee for five years, and now trying for the regional board in Cedar, said she feels there is not enough communication between the board and local groups about long range planning for services.

"So many are not aware of what the regional district does," she said. "We should know more about future plans."

L. L. Sheik Bosetti, also running in Cedar, said he is concerned about spot zoning and that there should be increased co-operation between the municipalities and other districts within the region. He added that he didn't think all nine board members should be up for election every two years.

Incumbent Mrs. Beryl Bennett in Departure Bay, said zoning, especially as it affects the development of apartments, is of great interest in her area. She said outside areas would like to see more building inspection.

Also running in Departure Bay in improvement district trustee Ray Brookbank who said the districts are not getting a full voice at the regional level. Trustees should be more involved in the operation of the board, he said. Brookbank also serves as a member of the Greater Nanaimo Advisory Planning Commission.

Frank Murphy, running in Wellington said he feels the regional district is the coming form of government to replace municipalities. As such, the board is able to provide for proper planning and land use concepts, he said.

"An issue is the role of the regional district, it should be getting more concerned with everything," Murphy said. He added that pollution control is an area where regional boards could have some effect.

David Block, a trustee of the Wellington fire protection district who is also running in Wellington, said, "my main concern is that in four years of having the regional district we don't know really what's going on yet."

He stressed that there should be a better information exchange between the board and the public.

Incumbent Mrs. Ada Howden is also seeking re-election in Wellington. She says her emphasis will be on economy — providing the best services at the lowest cost.

Mrs. Howden said many people in her area would like to see a recreation complex with an ice surface, theatre, and all-year swimming pool.

Incumbent Noel Filmer in the Lantzville area agrees that not enough is known about the regional board's function. He said he heard from one voter last week who said she didn't even know the board existed.

Filmer said he thought regional recreation would be a topic for discussion again this year and that it would be a good step forward if the board could come up with a system of how to handle garbage for the region.

Lantzville hopeful Dr. Sven Jensen said he feels the area should be represented by someone resident there. Filmer lives in Greater Nanaimo.

Jensen said there has not been enough feedback or communication between ratepayers and the board and that this would be fixed by having a resident represent them.

Andrew Pearson, a Parksville realtor, running in the Coombs-Hilliers district, said there has been apathy until recently among regional district voters because many don't fully understand the workings of the board.

He said zoning bylaws are "very necessary" for the protection of residents of unorganized areas. There are no bylaws now, but they are in the planning stage.

Pearson said the board could expand pollution control programs as the population increases and they become more necessary. The district could play a vital role in this field, he said.

Robert Osborne, running in Cedar, said the fact that only a small part of the area is covered by the building code means a free-for-all in planning. Public opinion is the only thing now that can stop undesirable buildings.

Osborne said he feels recreation will be a big issue in the coming year and that the board could participate in pollution control programs of all types — land, water and air.

Joe Dillen, incumbent seeking re-election in Coombs-Hilliers said the most important problems for the rural areas are planning, zoning and eventual building regulations.

"This will bring orderly development without pollution."

Dillen says he has not found a communication gap in his area as he is involved in many community activities and gives reports first hand to these various bodies.

Monetary Crisis Near Solution

OTTAWA (UPI) — U.S. officials are eager to reach agreement on the international monetary crisis and there is a "very real possibility" of a settlement before the end of the year, Finance Minister Edgar Benson said Tuesday.

Benson made the comment here on his return from a Washington meeting with U.S. Treasury Secretary John Connally Monday. "The Americans are very anxious to settle the international monetary situation," he said.

"There is a very real possibility that a settlement can be reached in the next month or two — if not at the group of 10 meeting in Washington Dec. 17 and 18, then very soon thereafter."

Benson was asked if Connally and other U.S. officials seemed "more conciliatory" during the talks. "If they are, they can afford to be," he said, following increases in the exchange value of the Japanese yen, the German mark and other currencies.

He indicated progress was made towards changes in the 1965 U.S.-Canadian auto trade agreement. He gave no details however, and said officials would still have to work out many aspects.

He was asked if changes in the pact would be part of a "package" of trade concessions in return for settlement of the monetary crisis and lifting of the U.S. 10 per cent surcharge on imports.

"It will not be part of the packaged but it will be settled," Benson said. "We have been talking about this for a long time and now we've discussed it at the ministerial level and it can go back to the officials."

Benson said he had discussed "certain problems" with Connally which previously had not been discussed by officials in the negotiations on the auto pact.

The Canadian delegation also repeated objections to the so-called DISC (Domestic International Sales Corporations) proposal in the tax bill now before the U.S. Congress, Benson said.

The proposal would give sizeable tax benefits to U.S. export industries and would encourage U.S. subsidiaries to close their Canadian plants and move them to the United States.

UN Demands Truce, Troop Pullback

From CP, AP

By an overwhelming vote of 104 to 11, the United Nations General Assembly called Tuesday night for a ceasefire on the Indian sub-continent and for withdrawal of Indian and Pakistan troops back to their borders.

Only most of the Soviet bloc, India and a couple of other countries opposed the 31-country resolution.

Other countries, including Britain and France, abstained.

Even the Soviet bloc was not unanimous in its opposition, with Romania voting with the majority.

The resolution is not binding and India is not expected to pay any attention to it.

United States and China, who have sided with Pakistan in the war, voted for the resolution, as did Canada.

Joining the Soviet Union and India in opposition were tiny new state Bhutan on the Indian border, and Cuba. Five other countries stayed away and one country declined to participate in the vote.

The vote was a reflection of the feeling of a majority of the countries that the sovereignty and territorial integrity of countries are inviolate and must not be interfered with.

In speeches before the vote, Canada and Pakistan called for UN supervision of any ceasefire. But there was no resolution on this matter.

A Soviet resolution calling for a ceasefire linked with political settlement in East Pakistan was not put to a vote.

In the war, India suffered a severe blow on its western front Tuesday but claimed it had crushed the "hard outer crust" of East Pakistan defences. It urged the Pakistani army in the east to surrender.

The Indians, under heavy attack in the west, admitted they had lost the town of Chhamb in the northern state of Kashmir. If the Pakistani drive there is unchecked, it will cut a vital road to the northern part of that disputed state. Chhamb is 30 miles northwest of the major Indian town of Jammu.

But on the Eastern front, All-India Radio reported Indian troops were "tightening the ring" around the East Pakistani capital of Dacca after capturing a series of important towns in the province.

In other developments:

● An official Pakistani spokesman in Rawalpindi said 305 civilians had been killed and 500 injured since Monday by Indian air force bombing and strafing in both parts of Pakistan.

● In Calcutta, officials of India's West Bengal border state said preparations were being made for the return of nearly 10 million refugees driven into India this year by internal strife in East Pakistan.

● In Moscow, informed non-Soviet diplomatic sources said the Chinese government will not intervene militarily in the war as long as Pakistan forces continue fighting.

However, should Pakistan show it is unable to hold out against the Soviet-backed Indian war machine, one said: "We will have a tailor-made situation for a people's war.

"China is not going to give it up."

Pakistan Radio announced Tuesday that President Gen. Agha Momammad Yahya Khan has asked two political strongmen in his regime to form a central coalition government — a move that would end his one-man military rule.

The government-run radio said Yahya requested leftist leader and former foreign minister Zulkfikar Ali Bhutto and rightist leader Murul Amin to set up the coalition government after Dec. 27.

Amin, who heads the minority Pakistan Democratic Party, is an East Pakistani and would assume the role of prime minister, while Bhutto would be his deputy.

Yahya, in an announcement from his home in nearby Rawalpindi, said he had made the decision to end his one-man rule in light of the civil war with East Pakistan and war with India, which have resulted in the disruption of communications between the two wings of the country, Radio Pakistan said.

January End Seen For U.S. Surtax

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau and senior ministers say they are confident after meetings in Washington that the international trade and money crisis will be settled in a matter of weeks and United States surtax on imports withdrawn.

Bilateral trade disputes between the U.S. and Canada are expected to be resolved simultaneously, although differences apparently remain on the future exchange rate of the Canadian dollar.

While expressing confidence on immediate trade and money problems following Monday's meetings with President Nixon, the prime minister attached the greatest significance to what he said was Nixon's reassurance that the U.S. has no wish to dominate Canada economically or politically.

That "fantastically new statement from the mouth of a president of the United States" means that Canadians will be able to consider imminent policy on controlling foreign investment "with greater freedom, less apprehension and less inferiority complex."

The prime minister's assessment of his Washington trip, reinforced by ministers and officials who accompanied him, emerged from a series of briefings, a press conference before he left Washington Tuesday morning and in a report to the Commons on his return.

His report back in Canada provoked mixed reaction that ranged from reserved approval by the Progressive Conservatives to harsh criticism by New Democrats.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said he was pleased about the Washington trip, but suggested that Nixon's general assurances about respect for Canadian autonomy should be backed up by more precise "guidelines" governing U.S.-Canada relations.

Linda's Wish May Yet Be Realized

By KATHRYN HAZEL
Colonist Reporter

Seven-year-old Linda wishes Christmas could be the way it used to be when Mommy was alive.

That was two years ago, before Linda's mother died and her father lost his job.

Tommie, three, and Joannie, five, were too young to remember much, but Linda does. There'd be a Christmas tree, which she would help decorate.

The boxes under the tree would be wrapped with red and green paper and inside would be wonderful things, like a doll, or a picture book, or a cuddly stuffed toy.

The "500" Fund

It isn't like that any more. Even when Daddy was still working, Christmas wasn't as much fun. Meg, the housekeeper, tried to cheer the place up, and she made a turkey dinner, but it just wasn't the same.

Since last February, when Daddy was laid off, life's been even gloomier. Daddy seems tired all the time, he never seems to smile or want to play games.

When Linda showed him the list she'd made for the three of them to give to Santa, he just put it in his pocket and turned away. He didn't even read it.

Linda's beginning to wonder if Santa's going to come at all this year. It doesn't look like they're going to have a tree, and Linda knows that even if they did, there wouldn't be any presents.

A contribution to the Colonist 500 Fund can bring happiness to Linda's family and others this Christmas. Money from the fund goes to Victoria's neediest families so they too can enjoy the season.

Donations may be sent to or left at the Colonist, 2631 Douglas, or dropped off at Avis Rent-a-Car, 800 Douglas.

President Matthews, leader Stanfield after election

Tories Unite To Support New President, Stanfield

OTTAWA (CP) — Don Matthews, of London, Ont., was chosen Tuesday president of the national Progressive Conservative party amid cheers from a thousand delegates who were told repeatedly the Conservatives will form the next federal government.

During the presidential campaign at the annual convention candidates called for party unity and hard work to prepare for the federal election expected in 1972.

Matthews said in his victory speech Conservatives must form "a united party behind our leader, Robert Stanfield, who is going to be our next prime minister."

Matthews, 45-year-old president of Matthews Group Ltd., a land development and housing company, drew support from all across the country, his campaign organizers said.

The factionalism and dissension which have plagued the Conservative party since the fall of the Diefenbaker government were almost buried under the atmosphere of confident unity.

But a few manifestations of discontent appeared in the presidential campaign.

James Baskin of Renfrew, Ont., said the party has not made good use of its human resources, particularly women and youth.

A faction composed partly of maverick Westerners and Diefenbaker loyalists provided much of the support for candidate John Pallett, former MP for the Ontario riding of Peel and once parliamentary secretary to John Diefenbaker during Diefenbaker's period as prime minister.

Island Blanketed

Cars Spin In First Snowfall

Tow truck operators in the Victoria area and other parts of Vancouver Island were doing a booming business Tuesday night as the season's first major snowfall blanketed the Island with one to four inches.

But the snow, which turned to slush on most Victoria-area roads after causing a rash of minor traffic mishaps, was expected to melt away by midmorning in most of the lower elevations, weather officials at Victoria International Airport said.

Snow began to fall early Tuesday evening in the Victoria area and Tuesday afternoon in areas on Vancouver Island north of the capital.

Late Tuesday night, depth of the snow rose to about four inches in the outlying regions of the Victoria area, Saanich police and RCMP in other communities said.

"The snow is staying on the road but the cars aren't" an RCMP spokesman said.

Police throughout the northern portions of the Victoria area said tow trucks were kept busy pulling cars from ditches.

Saanich police, Sidney RCMP and Colwood RCMP said roads were being sanded in their areas.

Colwood RCMP said the Malahat was closed to vehicles without snow tires and chains as the snow piled up.

Police throughout the Victoria area recommended that drivers begin to put snow tires on their vehicles, in preparation for later storms. They said, however, that snow tires have not been declared mandatory in the area.

Victoria was hit by a power blackout in an area within Government, Douglas, Herald and Bay treets from 9:05 to 11:10 p.m. Tuesday. Parts of Blanshard, Queens, and Victoria West were also affected by the blackout, B.C. Hydro said.

Traffic lights were out of operation at Douglas and Bay and Douglas and Chatham as a result of the blackout.

Hydro said a fault on a line at Government and Bay, possibly due to the storm, caused the blackout.

Officials at Memorial Arena reported the building was hit by the blackout while several hundred people were playing bingo.

Bombs Kayo Atom Smasher

STANDFORD, Calif. (UPI) — Two bombs exploded early Tuesday at the Stanford linear accelerator, tearing to shreds the electronic heart of the two-mile long atom smasher.

The FBI began an immediate investigation of the sabotage, which may keep the research facility shut down for weeks.

No one was in the area where the blasts occurred and they were not discovered until workers entered the building at the remote "trigger" end of the facility about 8:30 a.m. and found it "in a shambles." An official said the blasts could have gone off anytime between 11 p.m. and 8 a.m.

Several hours later, about 400 employees of the linear accelerator were evacuated after a bomb threat, but firemen found no more bombs.

Two major components of the accelerator control center were knocked out by the blasts. Damage was estimated at $100,000.

Missed

Two retired Uruguayan army generals, both unsuccessful candidates in recent presidential elections, fought bloodless duel with old-fashioned muzzle-loading pistols Tuesday. Liber Seregni, left, holding pistol, and Juan Ribas, fired two shots each from a distance of 100 feet. Both men missed. Duel stemmed from pre-election remarks by Ribas who called Seregni a perjurer, traitor and coward. The matter ended in reconciliation. Man in white cassock is priest.

Harry Hyrax Wants To Go Home

It's not a rat, a cat or a marmot. It's a hyrax.

Some people might think a hyrax is a sort of rodent that lives in tall buildings. But it's not — really.

It's a mammal that comes from Africa and about 10 million years ago it was a relation of the elephant and the rhino.

The hyrax is an adventurous breed, or so it seems from one member of the group who lives in Saanichton.

This particular hyrax is very fond of people and also of wandering about.

The hyrax in question took off last week from its home at Newman Road where it shares premises with biologist Ted Bergerud.

Poor Landing Job Cited as Factor In Airplane Crash

A poor landing approach by the pilot has been linked as a contributing factor in the Nov. 25 light plane crash which killed a Victoria RCMP officer.

President of the Courtenay Airpark Association, Eric Franklin, made this charge in a letter to Courtenay city council Tuesday.

"We believe that the high load factor on a low performance aircraft . . . under marginal weather conditions for the type of operation, were imminent factors contributing to the crash," Franklin said.

Franklin told Courtenay council in his letter that several witnesses had told the airpark association that the approach configuration of the aircraft was bad — "that is airspeed low, glide path too low, too much flap extended, power was not applied until the approach was badly undershot."

He also charged in the letter that the pilot had been "very inexperienced" but did not say on what information the association based the claim.

RCMP Constable Michael Robert Mason, 29, of 1245 Lyall, Esquimalt, was killed in the afternoon crash in which a Cessna 172 plunged upside down into the Courtenay River.

The plane's pilot, Victoria police Detective-Constable James Macdonald, 27, of 10221 Almond, Sidney, was seriously hurt in the crash and two other Victoria area policemen were injured.

Early reports said that the plane had struck a tree before crashing into the river but Franklin said investigations led the association to believe that this was not so.

All that could be found, he said, was one tree, a "spindly cedar" which was apparently struck by the plane's undercarriage, probably not impairing the aircraft's flight.

In defence of the Courtenay airpark, Franklin said that a fly-in earlier this year by more than 30 aircraft "in weather almost as deteriorated as on the day of the accident" was accomplished without incident. He added that comments from transport department, RCMP, and Canadian Forces about the airpark had always been favorable.

Franklin said he believed criticism of the airpark was made in order to publicly criticize the Canadian Forces Base at Comox for refusing to give landing clearance for the Cessna shortly before it crashed.

"This is normal procedure for aircraft without prior permission and not reporting an emergency," he said.

Franklin claimed that the Victoria chapter of the Canadian Aircraft Owners and Pilots' Association "have been conducting a vendetta with the Canadian Armed Forces for several years."

Victoria police said at the time of the crash, that pilot Macdonald was an experienced flyer . . . "an excellent pilot who won high praise for a recent job of shadowing-by-air above Victoria."

Courtenay council received and filed Franklin's letter without comment.

'Tis the Season for Thieves

By GEORGE INGLIS
Colonist Reporter

Christmas is the season of goodwill and also the season when shoplifters, amateur and professional, young and old, descend on gaily-decorated and busy stores.

"They come from every walk of life and they have some pretty fancy reasons for doing what they have done," the store protection chief of one Victoria department store, who declined to be named, told the Colonist in an interview.

The same official said the increase he felt most unhappy about was the frail grandmother-type on fixed income who stole some little toy or trinket because she just couldn't bear to see that little grandson go without a gift at Christmas.

One department store on the Victoria scene, Simpsons-Sears, is finding the greatest number of "boosters," as shoplifters are known to the police, comes from heroin users, many of whom have been chased from the downtown area due to too-frequent operations and the ability of the store protection officers to spot them.

Protection officer Blain Berg of Simpsons-Sears said the staff is given lectures and shown films on methods employed by shoplifters, especially the more sophisticated ones.

Among these devices are the booster purse, which has a trap door in the bottom; the carpenters' apron, worn under a loose coat to receive stolen articles; the dummy parcel, a suit or dress box with an opening to stuff with stolen goodies.

Among the less sophisticated methods are altering labels on items, by swapping from a less expensive item, a device which can be spotted by an experienced clerk due to merchandising coding on labels but is difficult for Christmas replacements.

Protection officers agreed Victoria Provincial Court is providing good backup for their operation, with a $250 fine being slapped on convicted shoplifters almost automatically and the prosecution department working in co-operation with the stores' officers and Victoria detectives, who assist in apprehension of suspects.

Forged or stolen credit cards do not present much of a problem locally, although a person thinking of using them might be tempted to use them around Christmas, when the clerks are busy and many are inexperienced, officials said.

"Fraud is a problem generally today," Archie Logan of Eaton's said, "because it is a more sophisticated way to obtain money than others."

There are, however, no new ways to combat the use of illegal credit cards at Christmas, he said, just the regular method of checking purchases over a fixed amount with the credit office, where the lists of stolen credit cards are surveyed.

In general, protection officers agreed, there are no specific types who can be designated as shoplifted types.

"They come from the very young to the very old," a police official said. "You just can't figure them out."

They range in reason from the youngster, trying it out for the first time, to the person who is in need but is tempted by the bright lights, tinsel, and dazzling displays. In between are the hard cases who do it for booze or narcotics, all year.

To the men and women of the stores' protective staffs, that is the way they play it, just like any other time of year, only with an increased staff to take care of the influx in business, just like storewide sales, spring sales, white good sales or any other events which last a few days and attract an extra number of customers.

Christmas — well it might not be exactly humbug to a store detective, but it certainly is humdrum.

Robert Baird Dies

Victoria Ald. Robert Baird, 65, collapsed while attending a gathering in the city's Gold Cup Restaurant, Yates Street, Tuesday night, and later died in St. Joseph's Hospital.

Baird, a Victoria mayoralty candidate in 1970, was an investment broker and had served more than seven years as an alderman.

In early September Baird suffered a heart attack while visiting Seattle and remained in hospital in that city for some weeks. While there a pacemaker was installed.

Mayor Courtney Haddock told the Colonist Tuesday night that he was deeply shocked.

"He was a hardworking and conscientious alderman. We are all saddened and shocked with his loss," said Haddock.

A byelection will likely be held early in the new year to fill the unexpired portion of Baird's two-year term. The alderman was elected in December, 1970. Under the Municipal Act, a nominations deadline must be set for a date within the next 30 to 45 days.

Gift List Used By Woman For Shoplifting

By BRUCE LOWTHER
Colonist Reporter

Two reasons for shoplifting not heard in Victoria Provincial Court in at least the last two years were given Tuesday in separate cases — one woman was shoplifting her Christmas list and another said she "just wondered what it would be like" to steal.

The two women were among six who pleaded guilty before Judge William Ostler to separate shoplifting charges of theft involving less than $50.

Laurie Denis Dujardin, 20, of 1010 Linden, was remanded to Dec. 16 for a pre-sentence report and sentence after pleading guilty to a two-count charge that followed stops Monday at the T. Eaton store and The Bay.

A security officer from The Bay said Miss Dujardin was stopped at about 6 p.m. with a $7 pair of sunglasses, a $10 wallet, two $6.99 pairs of gloves, tweezers costing $1.75, a $15 man's turtleneck sweater, two 79-cent pairs of pantyhose, two $1.19 pairs of pantyhose and five belts, three worth $6 each and two worth $4 each.

He said she had no money but carried a shopping list which mentioned belts at Eaton's and "a sweater for Mike at The Bay."

Miss Dujardin said there had been no food in her house for three weeks, the same time she had been looking for work. She admitted the list was mainly Christmas gifts and she was shoplifting them.

Ostler, who said he had never heard of the practice before in court, told her: "You have the effrontery to make out a Christmas shopping list and steal it so that other honest people with families to support have to pay more for their articles."

Mrs. Patricia Forrestall, 20, of 877 Dunsmuir, admitted taking a $2.89 crib blanket Nov. 10 from Simpsons-Sears and was hesitant to tell Ostler why she had done it. Finally, she said:

"It's just that I see people going into stores and taking things and I just wondered what it would be like. How it would feel to do this. Well, now I know and, believe me, I never want to do it again."

The judge asked if the blanket was for a child Mrs. Forrestall is expecting, but she replied: "No, your honor, I didn't even have a crib that size."

Ostler said then he saw nothing to distinguish this case from most shopliftings and fined her the normal amount: $250.

Also fined $250 each were:

- Diane Emily Martin, 19, of Salt Spring Island, who took a $1.69 hair-care item Monday from The Bay.
- Mrs. Ann Sherman, 65, of 1813 Quadra, who took a $1.29 hair-care item Monday from the Little John Discount store, 1322 Government.
- Mrs. Muriel Mary Thorne, 50, of 4311 Tyndall, who took three items worth a total of $1.17 Nov. 29 from The Bay.
- Edith Salisbury, 72, of 6589 Sooke, who took a $25 bottle of French perfume Nov. 16 from W. and J. Wilson, 1221 Government.

'Road' Halted Ferry Subsidy

Wrong Word Cut Links

Ottawa acted on misinformation when it cut federal subsidies for private ferry service to ports on the west coast of Vancouver Island, B.C. Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said Tuesday night.

As a result, the subsidies should be restored immediately so that service can return to normal, Campbell said in an interview.

He said inquiries from the B.C. government showed federal transport department officials had reported the areas concerned were now connected by road — something that isn't correct.

It was because of the supposed road links that the subsidies were dropped, Campbell said.

He said the provincial highways department is asking Ottawa to make the necessary amends.

"Our point is that if that's the basis on which they made their decision, they should certainly re-examine it right away," Campbell said.

Advanced Poll Draws 25

A total of 25 votes have been cast in two days of advanced polling for five seats on the Capital Regional Board to be filled in the Dec. 11 civic elections.

A board official called the turnout "heavier than anticipated . . . as advanced polls go." He said most of the 25 ballots were cast in the Outer Gulf Islands electoral area.

Today is the last day of advanced polling for election of directors to the Capital Regional Board.

Regular voting will take place Dec. 11, along with the civic elections in most B.C. municipalities.

- In Moscow, informed non-Soviet diplomatic sources said the Chinese government will not intervene militarily in the war as long as Pakistan forces continue fighting.

However, should Pakistan show it is unable to hold out against the Soviet-backed Indian war machine, one said: "We will have a tailor-made situation for a people's war.

Candidate Pleads Not Guilty to Assault

Scott Trial After Election

Victoria mayoralty candidate William Scott lost out Tuesday in Victoria Provincial Court to have a charge of assault by trespass against him decided one way or the other before Saturday's election.

Scott pleaded not guilty to a charge of assault by trespass in resisting attempts by Royal Theatre manager Martin Cave to have Scott leave the theatre Monday night.

Scott's lawyer, Rodney Taylor, asked if the matter could be concluded this week. But Judge William Ostler said the only open period in court during the week was Tuesday morning and prosecutor John Macintyre said he could not get the crown witnesses together in time.

The trial was set for Jan. 3 and Scott was released on his own recognizance in the meantime.

He said Monday night he had handed out cultural literature outside the theatre, during a Victoria Symphony Orchestra concert, because rival candidate Foster Isherwood was giving out election pamphlets and he (Scott) wanted to prove he was more of a cultural man than Isherwood.

Tuesday, Scott charged police were unnecessarily harsh to him after his arrest. He said his shoes were taken away and he was forced to stand for two hours in police cells before Taylor arrived.

Deputy Police Chief Ray Maitland said shoes, tie and belt are taken from apprehended persons for their own safety and added he was sure Scott was "treated with every courtesy befitting the situation."

Scott said he would ask for a hearing by the Victoria police commission of the matter.

Also in Provincial Court, Chuck Williams, 27, of 11 Eaton, was fined $50 by Ostler after pleading guilty to a charge of assault by trespass Monday evening in the Kings Hotel beer parlor, 568 Yates.

Macintyre said Williams was intoxicated and refused requests by both a waiter and the police to leave the beer parlor. Ostler told Williams it wasn't a question of a whim of the bartender — "it's his duty under the law" to remove troublesome people.

Solo Dancer Foils Inept Troupe

By BILL THOMAS
Colonist Staff

The Contemporary Dancers of Winnipeg offer a pointless performance in both senses of the word.

The company danced two recitals Tuesday at the McPherson Playhouse. The afternoon show was in bare feet and it was with one exception dull.

Easily the best thing of the afternoon was a solo performance by Rachel Browne to the sound of Odetta singing All My Trials.

She has all the poise and disciplined elegance anyone could ask of a dancer. Above all her hand movements are perfect.

This was all well and good but the quality of Miss Browne only serves to frame the inept performance of her company.

Alongside Miss Browne the rest seemed like oafs. It may not be their fault but the comparison is there to be made right on stage.

There is the possibility that the problem is twofold. The dancers may lack technique and on the other hand it could be that they are working with poor material.

Any movement that doesn't advance the mood or the story is redundant and the show is full of redundancies.

At the same time True Believer, choreographed by Robert Moulton, is really a good piece of work. The story of fanaticism is well told.

Moulton's work Rondo ad Absurdum was funny and the audience, mostly of little girls, loved it.

It is difficult to understand why the Victoria Centennial 71 Committee opted for the Contemporary Dancers when they were looking for a show to sponsor. There must be some cultural attraction in B.C. that is the artistic equal of this company.

There is also the matter of the ushers at the McPherson Playhouse. Do they really have to mutter continually and show latecomers to their seats in the middle of item four on the program?

Possibly the company has been the victim of its own publicity and we were expecting something really quite special. We didn't get anything really special.
